Special thanks to my daughter Karma Taylor Lattin for her frequent visits and steady encouragement and editorial assistance throughout this lengthy project. Also, to my grandson Jordan T. Hipwell I owe deep gratitude for his awesome ability to accomplish "photo reconditioning" so some final products have a more pleasing appearance. And yet some other photos are beyond human help.

Deep appreciation must be expressed to Weber State University's Art Department for sharing photos of artist Farrell Collett's paintings of the early forts that were used during the pioneer era in Ogden.

INTRODUCTION

On 10 April 2012, the curtains of time opened to reveal a fascinating scene from pioneer history in Farr West City. On that morning Randy K. Chambers came to visit the author and announced that while he was tearing out the contents of this older home in Farr West, planning to convert the place into offices for his construction business, he made a remarkable discovery. Right within that home he found a pioneer log cabin!

The events that followed during the next two days unfolded into something that resembled the plot in a movie thriller! As each detail evolved, the author became so enamored with the chain of coincidences that he wrote the story and contacted the local Standard Examiner newspaper to inquire whether the editor was interested in printing the unusual details. When a promised return contact had not materialized within two weeks, the author decided to phone the Deseret News office in Salt Lake City. That phone call was transferred to a KSL Television representative, who announced he would come with his camera later in the day to capture the story. Grasping the significance of the recent find in the middle of a rapidly growing city, this eager newsman shot photos of Mr. Chambers inside his recent

"dig" and then hurried to the home of this author. Here he took some shots of the historian pointing to his 1980 History of Farr West with its details of land ownership from earliest land patents until about 1940. Later that very evening numerous residents in Utah who turned on the evening news were astounded to learn how the relic of pioneer days had been "unearthed" in such an unusual manner.

Then the Associated Press picked up those historic details and circulated the story locally and elsewhere in the country. Relatives from as far away as Jerome, Idaho promptly notified the author of reading the story. He joked with Randy K. Chambers about becoming "famous."

However, other details associated with the remarkable discovery pique the interest of history lovers even more. Back on the morning of 10 April 2012 when Bishop John D. Chugg, instead of sending his hired man as usual to work in the young cornfield behind the Chambers property, came himself to do the job. As Randy emerged from the blue home, he asked John who might help him determine who had built the unusual log cabin. John just happened to know that his cousin (this author) had written a history of Farr West about three decades earlier, so he passed on that information to the inquirer. Randy could not resist the urge to come at once to the author's home. Randy's full story needs to be recounted here to understand its significance.

Back in July 2010 when Randy K. Chambers was looking for some property on which he could build some offices for his R. Ray Ward Construction Company, he found a couple of adjacent run-down homes in Farr West City that looked promising. When he decided to buy the properties, he unknowingly unlocked the door of some interesting Chambers family history.

After purchasing the reddish brick home at 2389 North 2000 West in September 2010 and completing extensive remodeling, he had an attractive building that accommodated his immediate needs for office space. The place was soon equipped with office furniture and humming with activity.

Later in December 2011 Randy was able to purchase the house and property just south of his office and then turned his attention to remodeling that adjoining older blue frame home at 2375 North 2000 West. Off came interior lathe and plaster, exposing old adobe which lined the exterior walls in part of the house. Then the workers made an amazing discovery. One of the interior rooms of the house was actually an old log cabin with three walls still intact after approximately 135 years! Since this sort of discovery seldom happens in a construction project, Randy's curiosity almost got the best of him.

Thus Randy met Bishop Chugg as mentioned earlier and learned where he might get some help to satisfy his curiosity about who might have built the newly discovered relic. He hurried to the author's residence and introduced himself to 91-year old Brian (Randy's niece had married Brian's grandson just about three years earlier). Relating his recent find, Randy asked if Brian happened to have information about the early settler who might have constructed the old log cabin. Brian replied that his 1980 history of Farr West had included a listing of all real estate transactions in Farr West from 1940 on back to the earliest government land grants about 1870. He promised to dig out his copy of the community history and determine who first owned the property where the cabin had been erected.

Beginning his records search with the name of Lewis A Jensen, who had owned the now-famous blue home at the author's earliest recollection, he found that Jensen had bought he property 11 Sep 1916 from Daniel B. Rawson. Rawson had in turn purchased the land from John E. Larkins on 21 Mar 1913. Larkins had obtained that land parcel from William J. Larkins 5 Jun 1906, who had purchased the property 2 Dec 1876 from Leonidas Alfred Pritchett. Pritchett had obtained the land on a USA patent 1 Mar 1875.

Entries from Taylor's 1980 " History of Farr West"

The author's great-grandfather Joseph Taylor, the first settler in Farr West, had arrived in 1858, and he was among the earliest settlers to obtain a land patent in 1870. From these facts alone one could not be certain that Pritchett's family was the first to occupy the land and build the log home. We could only say that he was the first settler on record that we can be certain occupied the land on which the "discovered" log cabin was built.

A second surprise came when Randy sent his brother Reid and his wife on 11 April 2012 to bring this author to view the newly discovered log cabin. While looking over the old log cabin with remnants of brittle plaster on the inner walls, plus a partially burned joist where a fireplace or stove had been located, the Chambers brothers recalled that their likable Grandfather had the name Leonidas. Incredible! How often does a name like that appear in one's pedigree!

Confident that the LDS New FamilySearch program on the internet probably held the full answer to the Chambers' partially solved puzzle, the author accessed the program soon after returning home. He learned that Alfred Leonidas Pritchett (given names reversed) had a daughter Catherine Letitia Pritchett who married a William Pollock Chambers and named their first son William Leonidas Chambers. He later learned that William Leonidas was Reid and Randy's GRANDFATHER! Randy had also given his firstborn son Nathan the middle name of Leonidas as well.

When the author e-mailed Randy the results of his research, the message found an ecstatic recipient. Randy had unknowingly bought the very same real estate on which his second-great grandfather had received a patent 136 years earlier!

To recap the incredible chain of events, consider the fact that Randy had been at the right place and time to meet Bishop Chugg. The latter was able to refer him to Farr West historian Brian Taylor, who in turn solved the puzzle through use of his early Farr West record AND the LDS New FamilySearch program--just how unlikely is such a chain of events to occur again in a place that used to be primarily a farming community!

In October 2012 the author remembered having heard that the Westergard and McEntire families in early Farr West also had Pritchett ancestors. He phoned Lurlene Westergard to learn whether she had additional historical information about the family of Leonidas Alfred Pritchett. Lurlene, in searching through family records, discovered that her brother Len (now deceased) had found a copy of the 1875 Pritchett land patent, which she shared with the author. Then when the author searched an early section of his 1980 History Farr West, he noticed a map he had obtained from the County Surveyor's office. This map, dated April 19, 1869, revealed that Alfred Leonidas Pritchett actually claimed his quarter-section of land at that early date. Since Farr West was first settled in 1858, it appeared possible that Pritchett was the original owner of his 160 acres.

This interesting chain of events seems to be a link with early Farr West and its residents. Contractor Randy K. Chambers' arranging an open house and "dedication" of this monument to our early settlers on 30 November 2012 was another coincidence, for it was the anniversary on which the Farr West Ward was organized in 1890. Dedication at 6:00 pm by Brian L. Taylor

Attached to the dedication program was a copy of a family biography, as follows:

The year was 1865 when Leonidas Alfred Pritchett and Elizabeth Ann Heninger Pritchett said good-bye to their beloved Virginia home and embarked on the long journey to Zion. Along the way, they stopped in Ohio just long enough to welcome their first baby daughter, Catherine Letitia Pritchett, into the world. It was the autumn of 1865 before they finally reached Salt Lake City with few belongings: a feather bed, an iron kettle, and two wool blankets. In the spring of 1866 the little family obtained 160 acres of land, built a log home, and settled down in what is now known as Farr West City,

One hundred forty six years later, Randy Chambers was looking for a place to store large equipment for his newly acquired business. Through a series of uncanny coincidences Randy was drawn to, and eventually able to purchase, a piece of property that would serve his business needs. While renovating this new house, amazingly, an old log cabin was discovered behind the sheetrock. What a thrilling find this was! Imagine our astonishment when records revealed the name of who had built this

HISTORY OF FARR WEST

Ancient History

Historians really snapped to attention in November 2004. While bulldozing in a gravel pit near Fillmore, Utah (near the southern shore of old Lake Bonneville) workers found a four-foot mammoth tusk (See photo on left). This find really "stoked" the imagination of historians in this part of the world. This discovery, along with that of the dinosaur skeletons unearthed in Eastern and Southern Utah, fires the imagination of historians everywhere. Elsewhere in the United States researchers have unearthed mammoth bones that they indicate come from animals living before the end of the last ice age, 11,000 B.C. ¹¹ Such findings make one wonder what interesting forms of life existed in the area we now call Farr West.

The average citizen who thinks of earliest Utah history mentally envisages early pioneers arriving in these valleys to find them occupied here and there with groups of Native Americans. Little thought enters the mind concerning other peoples or events related to earlier history of this area. The author decided to begin this historical record with some of the earliest recorded data which helps us to understand what it was like "way back when." In addition to enlarging our understanding, earlier history actually piques our imagination and excitement.

From our homes today we can observe telltale signs of an ancient lake shoreline along the Wasatch range. Known as Lake Bonneville (see figure at left), the body of water covered Northern Utah and spilled over into Eastern Nevada and Southern Idaho. Geologists have estimated that 15,500 years ago the lake reached its greatest depth of 980 feet. Climate changes over the years brought varying rates of shrinkage (e.g., 14,500 years ago the level had dropped to 344 feet.) Great Salt Lake is the main remnant of Lake Bonneville today.

No human beings could inhabit the area which became Farr West until the waters of Lake Bonneville receded. This history touch briefly upon two separate groups of the human race whose influence was felt directly or indirectly by those who became the earliest "permanent" settlers of Farr West.

Early Influence of the Native Americans and Fur Traders

Two major groups of people had roamed the territory before the arrival of the Mormons. The first of these groups, the American Indian, began to inhabit the area approximately 1,000 years ago. Two separate groups or tribes, the Utes and Shoshones, had favorite routes of travel through this valley and along foothills and mountainous areas. Here they harvested fish and game for their subsistence. Their activities which affected some of our Farr West settlers will be treated in a later section of this history.

The second group, whose influence may have actually led our first Mormon settlers to begin settling in the Farr West area, consisted of the fur traders/trappers. Beginning about 1810, a growing number of trappers and traders passed through the area which later became

Weber County. The earliest of these were French-Canadians who belonged to the Hudson Bay Fur Company. Nomadic Shoshone, Ute, and prehistoric Indians favored the area for centuries, hunting in the mountains and foothills and fishing in the streams. Mounds near the confluence of the Weber and Ogden Rivers contain remains of their camps⁵. An independent fur trader, Miles Goodyear, a native of Hamden, Connecticut, came west and engaged in fur trading in the western mountains until the declining beaver population and an increase in emigrant traffic on the overland trails led him to make some changes. He built a way station or fort on a large bend in the Weber River in 1845 and 1846, using local cottonwood trees. After constructing four log cabins to serve as corners of the fort, he added corrals outside the fort to accommodate horses, cattle, goats and sheep. Occupied by Goodyear, his Indian wife and two children and several Indian helpers, the fort became a base for the rapidly diminishing fur trade and a trading post for overland emigrants.

(Note: On September 5, 1843 The explorers John C. Fremont and Kit Carson passed the Utah Hot Springs and, probably journeyed through eastern Farr West, headed for a fur traders' old campsite at what later became Ogden City.)

American and British mountain men also entered the area in the early 1800's, trapping beaver and trading with the Indians. Famed Jim Bridger became in 1824 the first white man to report sighting Great Salt Lake. Peter Skene Ogden traversed the high valley just behind the Wasatch Front in 1825; obviously, Ogden City was named for him--although he never visited the actual site. The first accurate maps of the area were drawn by John C. Fremont after he visited the mouth of the Weber River in 1843.

Arrival of the Mormons and their "Settling In"

During the winter of 1846-1847 Miles Goodyear traveled to California to buy some horses for use in trading, then drove the animals eastward toward Missouri, trading along the way. During July 1847 while on his route, he visited with the first Mormon pioneer company on the Bear River west of Fort Bridger. He urged church leaders to settle on his land near the Weber River. His proposals received somewhat favorable consideration until Porter Rockwell found the road through Weber Canyon almost impassable. When he gave the report to his church leaders, they promptly took the southerly road from what is now Henefer, leading them to the Salt Lake Valley.

On August 9, 1847 Brigham Young sent northward an exploring party under the direction of Jesse C. Little. Finding Miles Goodyear's Fort Buenaventura (see painting at left³), the group was so impressed by the fact that corn was thriving there that they returned to their leader and gave a favorable report of their findings. Knowing that the rapidly growing population in the Salt Lake Valley would need additional good farm land, and remembering the hostile treatment from "Gentile" neighbors in Ohio, Missouri and Illinois, Brigham instructed that the Goodyear property be bought.

Miles Goodyear set a price of $2,000 for his property. Initial efforts to raise the money in Salt Lake City were unsuccessful. However, when Captain James Brown arrived at Fort Buenaventura on his return trip from California, he brought with him $3,000, part of which belonged to the Mormon Battalion and part to himself. The high council in Salt Lake City voted on November 24, 1847 to use this money to buy the Goodyear holdings.⁽⁴⁾ The agreed-upon price: $1,950. Goodyear claimed to have a deed from the Mexican government (which was never produced). However, he did give his buyers a deed to most of the area known today as Weber County (see below a map of the land bought from Miles Goodyear).

On January 12, 1848 Captain James Brown had sent his two sons from Salt Lake City to care for the livestock which had been left by Miles Goodyear at Fort Buenaventura. Three other families accompanied the Browns initially, but the group was soon joined by several other families, most of whom were members of the "Mississippi Saints" who had lived the previous winter at Pueblo, Colorado, with James Brown. Two trappers named Burrows and Briggs, along with their Indian wives, had already been living at Fort Buenaventura. This fort has the distinction of being the oldest site continuously occupied in the history of Utah.

When the Weber River flooded in May 1850, several of the families relocated about 70 rods southeast of the original Fort. The continuous arrival of settlers in the area contributed to the growth of the settlement, where another fort was built. Originally called "Brown's Fort," the place was changed to "Brown's Settlement" or "Brownsville" in honor of Captain James Brown. Still later the name was changed to Ogden (in honor of Peter Skene Ogden, a brigade leader of the Hudson Bay Fur Company, who had trapped in the Weber Valley a generation earlier.) The fort which had been constructed in that area was given the name of Ogden Fort (see artist's depiction of this fort at the right).³

In the October 1849 general conference of the Church, the assembly voted to lay out a city in Captain James Brown's neighborhood. To assure the success of the new city, Brigham Young selected 29-year-old Lorin Farr to take charge of the development. Arriving at his new assignment in January 1850, Farr promptly made arrangements for building the first sawmill and gristmill in the area.

Lorin Farr was instrumental in organizing the first city council in Ogden in 1850, and he became the first mayor of the city. (These events are of special interest to the author, whose 2nd great-grandfather James Lake was made a member of the first Ogden City Council when an election was held 7 April 1851. In those early elections only one set of candidates was considered, and these were normally nominated by the presiding authorities in the region.⁴)

As additional settlers swelled the Ogden area, the new arrivals began to move northward further and further. Inevitably they came into contact with more and more Indians, whose unusual customs led to occasional conflict. Many of the Indians were friendly, opening personal communication with the settlers and their leaders. However, when troublesome conditions led to serious conflict, Brigham Young directed that secure enclosures (forts) be erected, where the settlers could gather for protection. In addition to the original Brown's Fort, four others were erected successively in the Ogden area, viz. Ogden Fort, Mound Fort, Farr's Fort, and Bingham's Fort. As mentioned earlier, Ogden Fort, located near the small Brown's Fort, became a natural area of expansion for early immigrants in the Ogden area.

In the fall of 1848, Ezra Chase and Charles Hubbard brought their families about three miles north of Brownsville to an area that later received the name of Mound Fort (see artist's depiction of this fort at the left ³). After clearing the land of sagebrush, they planted corn, wheat and potatoes, which yielded very well. The next spring two more families arrived to assist in clearing the land and planting crops. The four men in the settlement dug the first ditch for irrigation purposes in the spring of 1849. Improved yields of their crops resulted at once. The main fort was rather small, so it could never support a sizeable population.

Early in 1850 when a number of residents north of the Ogden River began to be molested by the Indians, they started to enclose a five-acre plot of ground that became known as Farr's Fort (see artist's painting at right.³) Log homes were built so their back walls formed the outer walls of the fort. Space between the cabins' back walls was lined with pickets, the bottom of which were buried deep in the ground, the top extending about twelve feet above ground level. This fort was not used very long. The north wall was never completed. In the spring of 1851 some of its occupants moved out of the Ogden area to establish farms and homes.

Information about Bingham's Fort, which housed the earliest settlers of Farr West, will be included on Page 8.

In the spring of 1850, the first log cabin (in what was to become Harrisville) was built by Urban Stewart. An "uprising of the Shoshone Indians in 1850 occurred when a band of Shoshone Indians who had been encamped near Ogden began to leave on 15 Sep 1850 to winter near the Bear River. Their chief, Terikee, who was very friendly toward the pioneers, stayed to bid Lorin Farr and his family goodbye. Then the chief and his family camped near the farm of Urban Stewart on the Four Mile Creek, which later became part of Harrisville. During the night, Stewart heard what he thought was Indians stealing his corn. He ordered them out, and hurried into the house to get his gun. They were still in the corn when he returned. Stewart fired some shots toward the noise in the field where Chief Terikee was trying to remove his horses from the corn. A shot struck and killed the chief. Stewart, realizing the consequences of what he had done, became very frightened. He tried to get other settlers in hide him but no one dared." ¹ Urban Stewart then fled to Salt Lake and from there he went to California for the safety of other settlers as well as himself.

Lorin Farr, who was the presiding authority in Ogden, upon hearing of Chief Terikee's killing, immediately sent a messenger to inform Brigham Young of the danger. On 16 Sep 1850, Dimick Huntington was dispatched to Ogden to help by acting as an Indian interpreter. The following day 150 armed men were sent to help defend the citizens of the Weber area. (Author's note: Dimick was a cousin of the author's 2nd great-grandmother Philomela Smith.)

When Chief Terikee's surviving family members caught up with the rest of their Shoshone tribe and told them what had happened, all were understandingly very angry. They returned and burned Stewart's house and grain. The Indians demanded that Stewart be turned over to them or they would massacre all the inhabitants of Ogden and burn it. In retaliation, they killed an emigrant millwright named Campbell, who was employed by Lorin Farr. Mr. Campbell, a non-member who was working his way to California, had gone to Four-Mile Creek to help protect Urban Stewart's cabin and crops, but Campbell was killed. Before the troops from Salt Lake arrived with horses and cattle to negotiate, the Shoshone Indians had gone north after finding that Stewart had left the area. ⁴

Because of the 1850 incident resulting in the death of Chief Terikee, also because of an Indian uprising in Central Utah in 1853, Brigham Young advised church members to "fort up." Since Mound Fort was so small, pioneer families pushed northward. A number of families assisted in enclosing an area named Bingham's Fort in the present area of 2nd Street and Wall Avenue. Its name came from the fact that Erastus Bingham was bishop of the area north of the Ogden River. The general layout of the fort is shown below.

Artist Farrell Collett has captured on canvas the manner of construction of the Bingham's Fort walls (see below a photo of his historic picture).³

The settlers of what would be Bingham's Fort came to the area in 1849. In 1851 Erastus Bingham became bishop of the entire area north of Brown's Settlement (Ogden). Settlers dotted the land with cabins, cultivated fields and devised irrigation systems. After an incident in 1850 in which an Indian leader and settler were killed at Four Mile Creek in Harrisville, and because of Indian uprisings in Central Utah in 183, Brigham Young advised settlers to "fort up." Bingham's Fort was located on both sides of Second Street and mainly west of Wall Avenue. Isaac N. Goodale laid out lots and settlers "teamed" their cabins to the site or took their cabins apart and reassembled them inside the fort.

Because of the food shortage in 1854-1855, ironically some of the "friendly" Indians game up their arms and also lived inside the fort. Destruction of property and demand for food by marauding Indians tried the struggling settlers' patience, but Brigham Young's policy of firm kindness prevailed, and there was no loss of life."

By 1854 Bingham's Fort became a flourishing town of 732 souls, triple the population of Ogden. Other forts we re even smaller than Ogden. By 1855-56 several mercantile houses operated within the fort. Sam Gates ran a molasses mill. A block west of the mill the schoolhouse served as the center of community life for Marriott, Slaterville, Tracy's Branch, Broom's Branch, Harrisville, and other fledgling communities. Day school, Sabbath school, dances, quilting bees and spelling bees were held in the schoolhouse.

Trouble with the Indians faded by 1856 and the fort was no longer needed for protection. Brigham Young visited Bingham's Fort and asked the residents to move to Ogden, and some moved to their farm sites. Bingham's Fort had grown faster than anticipated, Ogden was intended to be the center of the city. Many of the residents moved into Ogden, and some moved to their farm sites.

Pleasant Green Taylor of Harrisville recorded added details of gathering to the fort, as follows: "1853 - During this season attended to my farm and raised a good crop. In July, on account of the hostility of the Indians, President Young called upon us to move to certain points and make forts of safety; accordingly I moved my family to what is known as Bingham's Fort.

In this place I assisted in building a wall of defense and some 110 families assembled at this place. This being about two miles from my farm. We had to be continually on our guard. I used to take my gun with me when I went to farm." ¹¹

Interestingly, the pioneers who moved into the fort customarily dismantled their log homes and moved them into the fort; then when the "scare" was over, these pioneers reversed the process to return to the original home site.

(Ed. note: Bingham's Fort enclosed an area of 40 acres. The walls were built of rocks and mud. Each family had an assigned portion of the wall to build. The wall was erected about four rods from the houses, with corrals taking up the space between the houses and the wall. Thomas Richardson, a pioneer boy who lived in Bingham's Fort tells how the wall was constructed. "The walls were made of mud. We did not have lumber to put up to hold the wall, so we placed upright poles, tapering (the mud) from about eight feet at the bottom to about three feet at the top. We set stakes between the poles and wove willows in like a willow fence, then filled the space with mud. We made a ditch nearby to run water down to wet the mud. When wet, we threw it in with shovels, spades or anything we had. We built the willow forms as the wall went up. It (the wall) was about twelve feet high. Wilford Woodruff reported in December of 1854 as he toured the northern settlements that there were 753 people living in Bingham's Fort. ⁴

The first settler of Farr West, Joseph Taylor, (see picture at left) was among those who inhabited Bingham's Fort. Since the story of his life illustrates the difficulties faced by early pioneers, some details of his life in those trying times will be recounted here.

Having lost his first wife in Kaysville, Utah, in 1852, he was left with four small children, so he soon married Jane Lake Ordway, a widow with one small child. Since Jane desired to live near her parents, James Lake and Philomela Smith, the Taylor couple moved to Weber County in 1854 (probably directly to Bingham's Fort, where James Lake's family had moved from Harrisville.)

After Church Authorities had requested that occupants of the fort move into Ogden City to assist in building up the area, early land records show the Joseph Taylor family had obtained title to Lot 4 in Block 30, Plat A in Ogden City (where the rectory of St. Joseph's Catholic Church is now located).

Apparently Joseph's family was still living in Ogden when Brigham Young received the word that Johnston's Army, which had been activated by secret orders of the War Department on 27 May 1857, was on its way to Utah. On 1 August 1857 Lt. Gen. Daniel H. Wells of the Nauvoo Legion (Utah Militia) issued official orders. In just over 2 weeks Joseph Taylor, in command of 50 soldiers, was headed up Echo Canyon on a mission to delay the approaching army in any possible way without taking any life. Joseph was later captured by the invading army; on one occasion he and his adjutant were served poisoned soup (which they did not eat). Another time their captors built a fire by their tent doorway, intending to kill them with the smoke. Surviving both of these attempts on their lives, Joseph planned and made his escape. This action enabled him to return to Gen. Wells and provide him with valuable information that he, Joseph, had heard in the enemy camp. Joseph then returned to Salt Lake City to report to Pres. Young. Although Joseph was ordered to return to his military unit, Johnston's Army made no further attempt to enter the Salt Lake Valley at that time.

Thomas L. Kane, who was friendly to the Mormons, came to Utah as a special representative of President Buchanan, met with Brigham Young and persuaded him to let U.S.-appointed Governor Alfred Cummings enter the valley. This change being made, Pres. Young instructed the saints in Weber County to take their supplies and move to the Provo Bottoms. They were still wary of what might result when Johnston's Army would soon enter the Salt Lake Valley. Inhabitants were instructed to leave kindling material in their homes so the Saints' homes would all be torched if any person were molested.

Settlement of Farr West

While existing biographies do not mention it, one can only assume that Joseph Taylor and his family followed the advice of Pres. Young and joined other relatives in the Provo Bottoms. However, when the threat of war ended, he moved his family back to Weber County and, according to historical records on file in the L. D. S. Church History department, they became the first settlers of what is now Farr West. Dudley Chase, another early settler, is documented as having made the following statement: 1858. "As far as can be ascertained at the time of this writing, Joseph Taylor, Sr., was the first settler in the western part of Harrisville, afterwards known as Farr West. He came here in 1858 and took up a farm joining Slaterville, where he made his home and lived on a part of that place until his death."

To the left is an artist's sketch of the Joseph Taylor log cabin as it appeared until the late 1930's. Elida Dickemore Taylor, who lived in one of the later-built Joseph Taylor homes, described the first Joseph Taylor cabin to artist Fermin J. Westergard, who then made a sketch of the cabin. When he showed his drawing to Elida, she averred that the drawing resembled the old home. (the author saw the old home at a distance while it was still sanding and thought it was considerably longer than the drawing indicates.)

Included in the Joseph Taylor family in 1858 were four children by his deceased first wife Mary Moore: Clarissa Jane, Mary Melvina, Joseph Allen, and William Andrew; his second wife Jane Lake Ordway Taylor, their three children, Moroni, Emma Jane and Lydia Ann, and Jane's son by her first marriage, Stephen Ordway, Jr., and Joseph's third wife Hannah Mariah Harris Taylor and their two children, Lamoni and James Henry. It stretches one's imagination to visualize these 13 people of various ages living together in their new log home.

In the fall of 1860 the families of Ezra Chase and Hugh McClellan settled in the eastern extremity of what late became Farr West. In September 1861 Dudley Chase moved onto the farm owned by his father Ezra and later obtained the farm from his father. According to information obtained from Dudley Chase there were only six other families living west of his place in western Harrisville when he moved there, namely: John George, Charles Price, Joseph Taylor, Charles Matthews, Samuel White and Haskell Shurtliff.

Pioneer life held many challenges for the early settlers. Biographies of our earliest pioneer-settlers often mention encounters with Indians (whom we now refer to as Native Americans). While specific encounters in the Farr West area may be documented only in family biographies, the author recalls having heard in his earlier years about Indians having a favorite campground near the southwest part of the town; a number of arrowheads had purportedly been found in that area since pioneer days. Wanting to verify this information, the author asked Louis B. Best, whose mother had grown up on a farm in southwest Farr West, if he had ever heard such information, Louis gave a positive answer, so including the information in this history seems appropriate. More recently a biography of the author's uncle, William Andrew Taylor, Jr., mentions that as a young boy (circa 1875) he played with an Indian lad. No mention is made in that account as to whether any language barrier existed, but then this consideration seems less challenging to children than to adults.

Biographies of the author's extended family contain incidents in which whites had reason to fear for their lives when Indians came near. "During the pioneer period Indians were usually friendly with the whites, and the latter in turn were generous with the red men, making a practice of giving them food whenever possible . . . Still the confidence existing between the two peoples could hardly be considered ideal. Children always ran for the house if they saw a band of Indians approaching; there was a general fear of red men in the minds of the settlers." ⁴

A rather interesting experience occurred in the life of James Martin as related to the author about 1960 by James' daughter Alta Martin. After her father settled in southwestern Farr West, he frequently had Indian visitors. When the Indian bucks would get some "firewater," their squaws would often come to the Martin home and beg Mr. Martin to let them hide from their husbands, who became very mean while "under the influence." Mr. Martin wisely suggested that they leave his home, go out in his field where the rushes grew very thickly along 6-mile Creek, and hide in there until they felt safe in returning to their husbands. So often after these drunken sprees, the Indian bucks would come to the Martin home in the middle of the night, creep into the bedroom and tap Mr. Martin on the head to waken him. Then they would ask him if he knew where their squaws had gone. Of course he would not divulge their hiding place, so the bucks would look around the barnyard awhile and then leave.

On May 31, 1856 the Western Irrigation Company obtained a charter to take irrigation water out of the Ogden River at a point one-half mile west of the mouth of Ogden Canyon. However, no construction was undertaken at that time. Further delay came when the Weber County settlers were advised to prepare to move south because of the approach of Johnston's Army in 1857-58 as mentioned previously. After the colonists returned to their homes in 1858 from the Provo area, a new charter was issued. This gave settlers in the Harrisville area the right to take water from the Ogden River at a point below Lorin Farr's millrace (a worn marker on the fence surrounding a condominium at 1251 Canyon Road in Ogden showed the location of this point.) Early construction of the Western Irrigation Company canal came as far west as the Dudley Chase farm. It carried five second feet of water. In 1884 it was enlarged to carry 39 second feet. (See photo on left.) Thomas B. Fray became the first superintendent of the irrigation company. (On 21 October 2012 when Mayor Jimmie A. Papageorge died, he was reported to have served a record 61 years on the board of directors for the Western Irrigation Company and 30 years as its president.)

Quite a number of families moved into the Farr West area in the years following 1860. Most of their homes were built from cottonwood logs hauled from Ogden and Weber Canyons. The roofs of these homes were constructed with two layers of log slabs, then plastered with clay, and finally covered with dirt. Doors and windows swung from rawhide or wooden hinges. Open fireplaces served as cooking places. Wooden pegs took the place of nails in pioneer times, for a pound of nails cost a bushel of wheat in Salt Lake City. The biography of Sarah Jane Marler Lake Taylor (the author's great-grandmother) indicated that in the spring of the year these pioneer homes presented a beautiful sight when the rooftop sod sent lovely green shoots into the air.

When Charles Matthews settled in western Harrisville with his family about 1860, he built a home in the ground (called a dugout--see at left a photo of a typical one) for a home. Then in about 1862 he built a two-room adobe house from the adobes he molded with his own hands from a clay pit on his own farm. See below a photo of the home after it was remodeled. This structure was located approximately 150 yards west of the current residence of Jason and Jamie Ellis at 2189 North 2000 West. The Matthews structure, known as the Prairie House, measured about 16 x 32 feet. At the time this was the only house besides a few log cabins in the Farr West area.

Mr. Matthews owned a large tract of land surrounding the Prairie House. After mining in Montana began to attract a lot of people--particularly from the East--much of that traffic came through the Farr West area. The Prairie House became a favorite place for travelers to lay over and feed their teams or to rest. Mr. Matthews began making malt beer for sale to his visitors, later adding whiskey to his attractions for visitors. He became quite well-to-do during the few years he lived here, but in 1866 he sold his property to Frank Randall and moved south.

No doubt fueled by the discovery of gold in Montana and its attraction of hordes of people who were hungry for worldly riches, a second favorite lodging place, the Half-Way House, was erected in Farr West near the southeast corner of the intersection of 2000 West and 2700 North Streets. Built on a knoll by Mr. and Mrs. William Burnett, this structure became a favorite place for young men of the area to congregate and listen to the tales of prospectors and other travelers. Constructed of logs, this structure stood on a knoll, where its owners enjoyed a season of prosperity. The structure remained intact until approximately 1920, when the William Gould Family decided to tear it down after they purchased the farm in 1916.

One of the earliest Farr West settlers, Daniel B. Rawson, bought some property from Chauncey W. West (now owned by Dale J. Chugg.) Mr. Rawson, a carpenter by trade, installed a shop with a turning lathe. He is believed to have made the first chair and spinning wheel in Weber County. He made coffins and his wife lined them. (See pictures below) He also did blacksmith work.

During the first 14 years after the Farr West area was settled, the residents of this area met with the people of Harrisville for all church and community events. In some of the recorded history of the Harrisville Ward, we find occasional mention of events or people which involved the western part of the settlement, as follows:

1863 - During his year Dudley Chase was appointed Ward Teacher.

1864 - Daniel B. Rawson, Sr., was chosen as school trustee.

1865 - During this year Dudley Chase was released as Ward teacher and Thomas White was chosen in his place.. Also, during this year Thomas White, Luman Shurtliff and Martin Harris were selected school trustees.

1865 - On May 14th the first Sunday School of Harrisville was organized with Martin Harris appointed as head teacher.

1866 - Daniel B. Rawson, Sr., was chosen President of the Eighth District (Harrisville). He occupied the farm that had been owned by Chauncey W. West on Six Mile Creek. George Lake and Dudley Chase were chosen as his counselors. Dudley Chase was replaced by Pleasant Green Taylor in December.

1867 - On April 21st the Sunday School was organized with Martin Harris as leading teacher and Stephen F. Wilson as assistant. Forty-four scholars were enrolled. Up to this year the people had occupied a log house for their school, their place of worship, their Sunday schools and other gatherings of all kinds.

1867 - During this year an adobe house was built 22' x 32'. The taxes that year were insufficient to pay the expenses, so the building was finished the next year. At that time there were 19 families in the settlement from Bingham's Fort to the Hot Springs.

1868 - Up to July 25th of this year the settlement was known as the Eighth District. Then a petition was presented to the county court, asking for a precinct.. The petition was granted, so a precinct was organized and given the name of Harrisville in honor of its first settler. At the August election Ezra Chase was chosen Justice of the Peace and Dudley Chase was chosen Constable. (The Farr West area was included with Harrisville in 1868 when the precinct was organized.)

1868 - On September 13th Martin Harris was released as leader of the Sunday School and Stephen F. Wilson was chosen to succeed him.

1868 - The first Relief Society was organized with Louisa Lake President, Nancy Rawson 1st Counselor, Jane Taylor 2nd Counselor, Mary Taylor Secretary and Louisa Harris Treasurer. Sister Harris kept a Relief Society store for many years, which benefited the community.

In 1868 William F. McEntire came with his family to Western Harrisville. He arrived when cold weather was approaching, so he hurriedly built a log house 16 x 14 feet. The roof was only half finished on Christmas Eve, when a storm was approaching. so his family hung a rug from the roof to provide protection for part of the house. Next morning six inches of snow had fallen inside part of the home which had not been protected. Cracks between the logs of the home had not been filled in, so snow had swirled around the family inside the house. On Christmas several of the neighbors helped to finish the roof.

The next spring Mr. McEntire planted five acres of wheat. Before it was ready to harvest, grasshoppers devoured his crop. He later replanted the field to corn and fortunately harvested a good crop.

1869 - On March 1st Joseph Taylor was elected school trustee in Daniel B. Rawson's place. Just prior to this Joseph Taylor had served as 1st Counselor to Daniel B. Rawson. During this same year the Pacific Railroad was laid out and built through the settlement. (See left a likeness of the engine.) Available land was brought into market and mostly taken up by residents of the district.

Earliest documented ownership of land in the Farr West area captures the interest of history lovers. Up until the coming of the railroad in 1869, no official land ownership records were maintained. Then the government began issuing "land patents" to those settlers who claimed ownership of certain surveyed lands. According to Weber County land records, the following land patents were issued by the U. S. Government to people living in the Farr West area: (See map on next page):

Many of the descendants and relatives of the above early settlers also live in Farr West City--a number of them on the very land that was occupied by their family pioneers.

Continued Growth--Church and Civic

The year 1871 brought changes in community affairs. Alonzo Pritchett, Thomas D. Brown and Joseph Allen Taylor were chosen to be trustees (presumed to be for the school). In August of that same year Daniel B. Rawson was elected Justice of the Peace in place of Ezra Chase. On September 21st the first U. S. Mail was issued to Harrisville. Stephen F. Wilson was appointed assistant postmaster and kept this office until his wife died of smallpox on January 17, 1878.

The first organization of young men in the western part of Harrisville took place December 20, 1873. Known as the Debating Society, it was presided over by Thomas White with William J. Larkin as Vice-President and Sam Hiatt as Secretary. Its announced purpose was to cultivate the minds of young men in a time of study during winter evenings. Then on November 17, 1875 the first organization of Young Ladies was completed in Harrisville (no names available). On December 15th of that same year the Young Men were reorganized, after which the organization was known as the Young Men's Mutual Improvement Association. Arthur M. Rawson became the first president with William A. Taylor, Sr., and Seth Painter as counselors.

In 1874 the William Rawson family moved from Ogden and settled on Rawson's Corner, which includes the current Owen C. Garlick family residence. Mr. Rawson established a general merchandise store. About ten years later his store was purchased by he Relief Society and operated under their jurisdiction until Harrisville was divided in 1890, after which the stock was shared jointly by he two communities.

On May 8, 1875 a cooperative , called The Home Industrial Cooperative Association of Harrisville, was organized with James Martin, President; Seth Painter, Vice President; William J. Larkin, William A. Taylor, Sr. and Thomas D. Brown, Directors; William C. Rawson, Secretary; Arthur M. Rawson, Treasurer. This group began raising sugar cane (see picture on left) and purchased a molasses mill and installed it on Six-mile Creek on a portion of

Daniel B. Rawson's land, where it could be run by water power. The water wheel turned the grinders, which extracted the juice from the sugar cane. The juice was boiled to produce molasses, providing all the syrup or sugar that the settlers consumed in the coming years.

In 1876 the authorities of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints counseled the local members to begin their dances at 2 P. M. and close at 10 P. M. This meant eight hours of dancing the schottische, quadrille, Virginia Reel, and Highland Fling. The survivors of such vigorous activity should have been well prepared for any other part of frontier life.

Tragedy struck the settlement in the winter of 1879-80, when an epidemic of diphtheria took the lives of children. Among the families who were affected were the Robert Fishers, who lost two children; the Temple Shorts, who lost three children; the Peter C. Stephensons, who lost two children, and the William A. Taylors, who lost three children.

On April 28, 1881 the West Harrisville Relief Society was first organized with Mary Hegsted, President; Mary Taylor, 1st Counselor; Eliza C. Larkin, 2nd Counselor; Christena Hegsted, Secretary; and Eliza Jane Rawson, Treasurer. The Primary was also organized with Harriet Dabell, President; Mary A. Rawson, 1st Counselor; Cora A. Larkin, 2nd Counselor; Catherine White, Secretary; and Lorene White, Treasurer. Then in about February 1884 the West Harrisville Sunday School was organized (separating it from Harrisville) with William J. Larkin, Superintendent; William F. McEntire, 1st Assistant; James Martin, 2nd Assistant; and Elizabeth Brown, Secretary.

Polygamy in Farr West⁹

Some of the early settlers of Farr West who claimed membership in the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints were also living in polygamy. This doctrine had first been publicly declared in a special conference held in Salt Lake City August 28 and 29, 1852. A number of the L. D. S. leaders were already practicing the doctrine. At the end of the first year of migration to Utah, the number of women had exceeded the number of men; this excess continued for half a century. Under the practice of polygamy, the "excess" of women was absorbed into family life.

The revelation of plural marriage was proclaimed by Brigham Young in 1852 and the practice became more common after that. It was held that any person could only attain the highest level of the celestial kingdom after death if he or she had been a partner in a plural marriage.

The exact percentage of Latter-day Saints who participated in the practice is not known, but studies suggest a maximum of from 20% to 25% of LDS adults were members of polygamous households. At its height, plural marriage probably involved only a third of the women reaching marriageable age.

The popular idea that Victorian Mormon husbands had many wives is untrue. Except for Church leaders, Mormon men rarely had more than three wives.

That the practice of plural marriage was defended in Farr West is evident from an entry dated 9 March 1870 in the Church Historian's Office copy of the History of Farr West, as follows:

"The Relief Society held an investigation meeting protesting in strong terms against passing a bill before Congress, known as the Cullom Bill. They manifested a determination to support their husbands and sons in the principle of Patriarchal Marriage as revealed from Heaven, through the Prophet Joseph Smith."

Continued efforts by the federal government to suppress the practice of plural marriage included the following:

- March 1882 - Passage of the Edmunds Bill:
 - Outlawed unlawful cohabitation
 - Deprived all who lived in polygamy the right to vote or to hold public office.
 - A mere belief in the practice of plural marriage was sufficient to bar a person from jury service.
 - Declared all registration and election offices in the state vacant
 - No person who had ever lived the law of polygamy was allowed to vote
- October 1884 - A "segregation ruling" allowed separate indictments of a man for every day that he was found guilty of living with a plural wife.
- March 1887 - Congress passed the Edmunds-Tucker Law, which provided for disincorporation of the L. D. S Church and the Perpetual Emigration Fund Company.

A campaign of bitter persecution ensued from all the dictatorial and unfeeling laws which is recorded in the History of Farr West in the Church Historian's Office, as follows:

- Jan.3, 1887 - Harvey Murdock was sentenced to the penitentiary for 5 years and pay $500 for polygamy. Persecution began in the winter of 1885. Many were deprived of the association of their families and comforts of home by plans concocted by their enemies.

- May 28, 1887 - Daniel B. Rawson and Hans Hegsted were sentenced to the penitentiary for six months.

persecution which was related to polygamy continued unabated until after the Manifesto was issued September 25, 1890 by President Wilford Woodruff. An indication of the seriousness of the conditions that had existed is found in the following entry on December 23, 1889 in the same ward history cited above, as follows: (U. S. laws) "were enacted to stamp out a practice, which members of the LDS faith were taught to be of divine origin, while others viewed it to be anti-Christian.

"The authorities requested the people to fast and pray that the Lord may check the persecution that exists among our people."

Organization of Farr West Ward

Lorin Farr

Chauncey W. West

William A. Taylor

Just about two months after the issuance of the Manifesto, a public meeting, which became of singular significance to local citizens, was held November 30, 1890 in the "West Schoolhouse." At this meeting a decision was announced to separate Harrisville and West Harrisville. The western section was named Farr West in honor of Lorin Farr, (see monument photo on next page) former president of the Weber Stake, and Chauncey W. West, who had served as presiding bishop of Weber County. Both of these men had held other prominent positions. Lorin Farr had been elected the first mayor of Ogden in 1850; Chauncey W. West had served as Brigadier-General of the Weber unit of the Nauvoo Legion, which was given the post of honor throughout the trouble with Johnston's Army. Also, he had been president of the European Mission and had been a contractor for the Central Pacific Railroad in 1869. Bearing the name of two such outstanding men was certainly an honor for the new community.

William Andrew Taylor, Sr. was chosen to be the first bishop of Farr West with William C. Rawson and Jacob Thomas as counselors.

Church meetings had been held in the red brick schoolhouse until the anti-Mormon Liberal Party (political) came into power in Ogden on February 1, 1889. This party soon forbade any religious activities to be held in school buildings, so the need for a new meetinghouse became an urgent priority. Charles Chase, an expert carpenter, cabinet maker and civil engineer, volunteered to oversee the project. Under his supervision the construction of a new building got underway at once. Members of he community attacked this assignment so vigorously that they were able to use the new building for their Christmas festivities on December 25, 1891. The 56 x 30 foot building had been completed in four months at a cost of $1,500. A loan from Sadie Randall enabled the ward to buy the lumber; ward members donated the work. Ten years' time was required to pay off the loan because cash was very scarce following the national debt crisis of 1893.

When the Farr West Ward was organized on 30 Nov 1890, it belonged to the Weber Stake. When the North Weber Stake was organized 2 Aug 1908, Farr West became part of that stake. On 18 Jan 1942 Farr West was included in the new Farr West Stake. It became part of the newly organized Plain City Stake 30 Oct 1977. When that stake was divided in December 2000, the name "Farr West Stake" was reassigned to the town of Farr West. Then on 14 Jun 2012 the Farr West Utah Poplar Stake was created. At that time the new stake and the Farr West Utah Stake both contained some Plain City members.

Loss of a Great Landmark -- Resulting Changes

During the night of Feb. 13, 1944 when Lt. Nolan R. Taylor stepped into the kitchen of his home, he noticed a bright light coming through the window. When he hurried to see what was making such a bright light during the nighttime hours, he saw the ward amusement hall engulfed in flames. Fifty-three years worth of precious memories were wrapped up in this historic landmark, which had served community members as their chapel and later as their amusement hall.

For twelve years following the burning of the historic building the ward was somewhat limited in the type of activities that could be conducted. Occasional arranging for the use of the Wahlquist School gymnasium satisfied the need for reunions, M. I. A. road shows, and other special occasions. July 3, 1956 became another red-letter day for Farr West residents when ground was broken for an addition to the Farr West Ward Chapel. The improvement involved remodeling of the existing building and adding a cultural hall, kitchen and classrooms. Construction costs for the changes amounted to $142,000. Wherever possible, ward members donated labor to assist in completing the project. (Editor's note: A rather unique step in the fund raising was initiated by Bishop Theo L. Thompson. He bought a load of wiener pigs at the Ogden Stockyards and brought them out into our community. He drove from one farm to another, asking each farmer to volunteer to take as many pigs as possible to feed for the season. Then the bishop came around in the fall to take the more mature pigs to market. This assignment tested the faith of the farmers in many cases. (The author remembers that his father Riley had built a temporary fence around part of our straw stack, but those young pigs had a way of burrowing around the end of the fence and getting out to "enjoy greener pastures.")

Upon completion of the construction and arrangements for dedication of the structure, the following announcement appeared in the local Standard Examiner newspaper:

Farr West to Dedicate Newly Remodeled Chapel
FARR WEST--The Farr West LDS Ward will dedicate its newly remodeled and enlarged church building at 3 p.m. on Sunday, with Elder Richard L. Evans of the Council of Twelve, giving the dedicatory prayer in the newly remodeled ward chapel.

Other speakers will include President Raymond Pace of the Farr West Stake, Bishop Theo Thompson of the Farr West Ward, and Wilford Jensen, building supervisor.

The Farr West Ward, which will be 68 years old on Sunday, was originally known as West Harrisville. It was organized on November 30, 1890 with William Andrew Taylor as the bishop.

first

Church meetings were first held in the community schoolhouse, and a year later a new frame church building was completed. Ward members built the new structure in a short four months, but it took several years to pay off the indebtedness.

Bishop Taylor served until 1892 and was succeeded by William McEntire. Six years later Bishop James Martin took over the ward's highest office.

BISHOP FOR 19 YEARS

In 1909 Moroni Chugg was sustained the new bishop, an office he held for 19 years.

During his administration a new brick church building was erected at a cost of $19,700. The new structure contained a chapel and nine classrooms. This building was dedicated in 1926 by President Heber J. Grant.

On May 20, 1928 Lorenzo Taylor was made bishop and served for 10 years. He was succeeded by Almon D. Brown, who served as bishop until May, 1944. James A. Davis became next in line and headed the Farr West Ward until 1948

The present bishop, Theo L. Thompson, has guided the ward's activities since that time.

On July 3, 1956 ground was broken for a new addition to the ward chapel. This includes a recreation hall, Aaronic Priesthood room, Junior Sunday School and Relief Society rooms and a modern kitchen.

The chapel was completely remodeled and existing classrooms renovated and improved. Total cost of the project came to $142,000. In addition the grounds surrounding the church have been completely landscaped and beautified and a large parking area has been hard topped.

Following the dedicatory services in the afternoon, the regular sacrament meeting will be held at 7:30 P.M. At this time all former bishops of the ward, still living, will be honored.

They will include Bishops Chugg, Taylor, Brown, Davis and the present Bishop Thompson.

Growth and Division

One change which later had a profound effect upon community life was the development of Ben Lomond Mobile Home Estates (Later renamed to Wasatch View Estates) in 1972 by the Saunders Brothers of Harrisville. Its capacity: 268 units. The author recalls that announcement of the project was not well received in our small community because of unpleasant financial and social experiences that other mobile home communities introduced into the Ogden area. Later another mobile home community followed in May 1972 at the south end of the community. Dr. Rex M. Alvord developed this second community of 318 units, which later evolved into Westwood Village Mobile Home Community. This latter development brought much more positive results for Farr west than did the first.

A mild controversy arose as tenants began moving into the Ben Lomond Mobile Home Estates. The property was claimed by the town of Pleasant View for tax purposes; however, the townfolk of Pleasant View felt that tenants of the estates should attend church in Farr West. The matter was finally settled by presenting the matter to higher church authority; the tenants were to attend church in Farr West. Interestingly, an immediate change took place once the matter was settled. Newcomers from Ben Lomond Estates were welcomed into the Farr West Ward, and many warm and lasting relationships were established almost immediately. Farr West had a reputation for warmth and friendliness and intended to live up to that image.

The surge in population occasioned by its latest additions led to the division of the ward on October 22, 1972. Owen C. Garlick became Bishop of the Farr West 1st Ward and Jay A. Davis became bishop of the Farr West 2nd Ward.

Population in the Farr West community showed gradual change following the initial division of the ward. However, a surge in growth was triggered when the Randall Acres subdivision in the northwestern part of the community was begun by developer Franklin D. Maughan, Sr. Soon Harvey Hill began development of a low-cost housing area in the extreme southern end of the town. The Perry Berg subdivision in the western part of the community brought continued growth.

Farming Changes in Farr West

The earliest settlers in Farr West were concerned with raising what they had to eat. The first settlers who came to live in this area were farmers who utilized horse-drawn implements to work the soil. The author has not only seen a horse-drawn plow that the farmer followed on foot, but has used one to plow the headlands of a field and fully utilize the land.

Joseph Taylor no doubt had one of these plows (shown on left) among the "farming utensils" that he itemized in an 1853 listing of his possessions before moving to Farr West.

Early settlers of Farr West were required to use tools for harvesting hay and grain that seem rather primitive to us today. The scythe (see picture on right) was used to cut hay and grain. While this seems to be a difficult way--and a slow one--for cutting a crop, a good worker could cut five acres or more a day

For cutting grain, a cradle was attached to the scythe. It was a device with "fingers" that caught the grain when the operator made a swoop with the blade. The grain heads would all be lying in one direction as the swoop ended, enabling the operator to empty the grain in a pile for binding by hand.

Threshing of the grain in those days was usually done in a special area called the threshing floor. There the grain was usually beaten with a flail or hinged stick to get the grain out of the heads. Afterward, the chaff was sifted out of the wheat, allowing the breeze to carry off the light chaff as the grain was dropped from a container.

By the time Farr West was settled, grist mills were already established in North Ogden and Ogden. Earliest settlers in the county had been previously required to take their wheat to Salt Lake City to get it ground into flour.

With the passing of time machines were developed to cut the grain and bind it into bundles, which were then stood on end in shocks to dry for threshing. (See photo on left) These bundles were later hauled into the threshing site and stacked for convenience of threshing as shown below. Gradually the farmers graduated to the use of grain "separators" which were driven by steam engines.

Of all the farming activities in bygone years, none brings more poignant memories than threshing time. After better machinery became available, several threshers were used in the county, but to Farr West farmers, the word "thresher" was synonymous with the old steam engine owned by J. Elsbury Garlick, Henry T. McEntire and Hans C.(Chris) Westergard. These partners enlisted the services of Ezra D. Taylor to run the old "water wagon."

A blast from the familiar steam whistle would announce to townfolk the whereabouts of the community attraction, causing groups of children to excitedly convey to the grownups indoors some message such as "The thresher is down to Martin's place."

The old steam engine always seemed to move at a snail's pace from one farm to the next, where the various thresher "stations" would be manned by the threshing crew. To youngsters the great machine seemed monstrous. How they loved to watch as Chris Westergard guided the huge engine down the street, the gigantic metal wheels making a "ping" sound whenever they flipped an occasional loose rock off the gravel-topped roads. Chris seemed to have a special knack for placing the grain separator machine just right, disconnecting the hitch from the steam engine, then deftly wheeling the steam engine around facing the separator at just the right angle and distance. Soon all hands were ready, and the men on the stacks began feeding the golden bundles, head first, into the hungry behemoth after the roar of the equipment mounted to operating speed.

Plump Elsbury Garlick was a familiar sight around the thresher with his long-spouted oil can, a red handkerchief folded once and tied around his neck to keep out the dust. Henry McEntire's domain was the bagging process. After a bag had been filled, he would switch the bagger controls to begin filling another sack and then help the grain carrier hoist the heavy sack of wheat onto his shoulder so he could transport it to the granary.

The "blower boy," who guided the straw blower so it would form a neat straw stack, always had the dusty, dirty job. How he longed to grow up so he could be graduated from that assignment. (Personal note: After the job was finished and the crew had evaporated into nowhere, the author could hardly wait to undress and jump in the old milk-cooling tank for a chance to wash off the itchy threshing dust.)

The women folk helped to make threshing the memorable experience that it was. Mealtime for the threshing crew meant an opportunity for the housewife and her helpers to put on an exhibition of culinary art--and almost without exception those heaping bowls and platters of steaming food were fit for a king. A number of young men loved to "follow the thresher" to make a little extra money AND to savor those daily feasts.

Later, during the 1940's, stacking grain became a thing of the past. Farmers found a way to save handling the grain so much by exchanging work and just loading the grain onto wagons from which it was fed directly into the thresher.

In about 1950 when the threshing operation gave way to modern combining equipment, a golden era of farm life came to a close.

The War Years' Impact on Farr West

Through the years a number of Farr West residents have either volunteered or been drafted into the service of our country. At least three of the early settlers of this area (Daniel B. Rawson, Sr., James Owen, and Joseph Taylor) had been members of the famous Mormon Battalion from its organization on July 16, 1846, traveling 2,000 miles from Fort Leavenworth to San Diego before being discharged July 16, 1847. Ten years later when the Utah War began, Major Joseph Taylor of Farr West was ordered by General Daniel H. Wells of the Nauvoo Legion to annoy and hinder Johnston's Army in every possible way as it moved toward Salt Lake City. Captured by the United States troops early in 1857, Joseph nearly lost his life by food poisoning and by being suffocated by smoke within a tent arranged for that purpose. However, he was able to escape and return to friendly territory.

When the United States was driven to declare war on Germany April 6, 1917 during World War I, nine young men from Farr West were enlisted in the service of our country:

Clarence Gould	Elmer Taylor	Earl Booth
Nathan Chugg	Wendell Homer	W. Russell Taylor
George Davis	Charles F. Larkin	J. Earl Thomas

Although some of these men were sent overseas, only one experienced front line combat. Earl Booth was gassed (not fatal).

After the United States entered World War II on December 7, 1941, an impressive group of men and one woman from this community served our country:

Clarence D. Brown	Watha R. Brown	Grant D. Chugg	Rulon V. Chugg
Lewis Cook	Blaine Coy	Lowell Cutler	Donald M. Dickamore
Richard E. Engle	J. Howell Fisher	Charles A. Groberg	Richard Groberg
Stanley R. Groberg	Thomas E. Higgins	Donald R. Jensen	Dan F. Kimose
James A. Kimose	Carl A. Lund	Dale Markland	Chris H. Markos
Herman Markos	James H. Markos	Lowell A. McEntire	William J. McEntire

Lamar Murdock	Perry Gale Norwood	Richard G. Norwood	John F. Painter
Virgil Painter	Robert T. Pledger	Glen Rawson	A. Ray Rawson
Urban V. Rawson	Joyce Saint	Kenneth D. Schoonmaker	Bill M. Smith
Byron S. Taylor	Clarence A. Taylor	DeWain Taylor	E. Robert Taylor
Garold T. Taylor	Leland D. Taylor	Lewis D. Taylor	Melvin H. Taylor
Nolan R. Taylor	Verl L. Taylor	Leon B. Thompson	Harold O. Vause
Wayne A Vause	Frank C. Westergard	Harold Westergard	A.

Three were killed in action:

When World War II began in 1941, the number of ward members serving in the armed forces kept growing. In 1943, members of the Farr West Ward began publishing a monthly letter, which was sent to the servicemen to lift their spirits and keep them aware of happenings in their home town. Often the newsletter contained one or more pictures of servicemen and gave information about their current activities. The following pages include excerpts from some of these newsletters.

Bishop's Message

"There is a law, irrevocably decreed in the heaven before the foundation of the world, upon which all blessings are predicated; and when we obtain any blessing from God, it is by obedience to the law upon which it is predicated."

It is our prayer for you boys in the armed forces that all will obey the teachings of the Father and the Mother that you have left behind. That out of your trying assignments and hardships there will arise a bigger and a better soul.

Through obedience to the commandments of God in your afflictions your soul is sanctified.

There are no short cuts on the trail to eternal progression and happiness. It is plain and easy to follow, but directions for every mile must be fully obeyed.

Be honest, live the simple truths you all know, and grow in your

Jim Kimrose Home On Short Furlough

Farr West was very happily surprised Thursday, June 3, when Private Jim Kimrose arrived home on a furlough until June 16. Jim had been stationed at Fort Sumner, New Mexico. Recently he has been driving a truck on convoy. He was a graduate from the Mechanic School at Luke Field, Arizona, where he was with Blaine Coy, another of our soldiers from Farr West. Jim has been in the army since October 26, 1942, when he enlisted in the air corps. He says: "I think army life is swell although it does get rough at times. The chow is fine but it can't compare to mother's."

Stake Presidency's Message

Dear Soldier Boys:

As we greet you in this first issue of our ward paper, uppermost in our minds is the thought of the service you are rendering to your ward, your stake and your nation. Yours is a great responsibility, for you have been called, not only as a defender of your country, but as a standard bearer of liberty throughout the world.

We have been wondering just what your reaction to the situation is: whether or not you have been able to adapt yourselves to the conditions that surround you; whether you still remember your friends at home; and whether you are thinking seriously of the things you have been taught by your parents and the officers of the ward. After all, we should be like one family; when one is called upon to sacrifice, all members of the ward should share with them.

Whether you are a member of the church or not, you have at some time come under the influence of its teachings and are somewhat familiar with them. First among these teachings is virtue; a boy who keeps himself virtuous, clean and pure is sure to have the admiration of his friends and the blessings of his Heavenly Father. Mormonism teaches us that virtue is one of our greatest possessions.

Next, we have tried to teach what is known as the Word of Wisdom; that we should abstain from the use of tea, coffee, liquor to tobacco; in other words, keep ourselves "physically clean mentally alert and morally straight" that we may be strong and prepared for any emergency that may arise. It may be necessary for some of us to pass through the supreme test, even to give our lives for the protection of our nation, and if we do so with a clean mind and body we will be able to meet our loved ones and friends in the great hereafter without any sorrow or remorse.

The Lord has said: "Ask and ye shall receive," and if you desire strength of character, power to overcome evil and the ability to gain the love and confidence of your associates and friends, go on your knees in secret and ask God to give you the blessings you desire. Prayer, and prayer alone, will bring you strength in your hour of trial, so don't let a single day pass in which you have not asked for

News and Views Of Home Front

Black and White Day at Plain City stirred up some enthusiasm in Farr West. Show fans Shorty Thompson, Gary Garlick and Dale Chugg showed their pet animals and carried home blue and white ribbons.

James Davis and Nathan and John Chugg also won some distinction with their Jersey herds.

The week ending May, and the first week of June brought one of those million dollar rains the city people always talk about the farmers receiving. However it was much welcomed by the county farmers, for everything was getting dry; even Heber Lunds hay was getting dry enough to haul. Did it get wet? (Ask Howard Dabb.)

The crops as a whole are looking very well, everything looks very promising for a good harvest. Ruben Alvord tells me that he and his wife are getting a lot of fun out of furnishing five hundred of our boys in the services with two eggs each morning.

Since J. D. Brown has displayed the idea of making the highway into a lawn, some of the other neighbors are getting landscape fever. Glen Taylor has a fine lawn coming, but since lawnmowers are so hard to get he cuts his grass with a pair of hair clippers.

Lloyd Hunter says as soon as he and his wife can agree on a color he is going to give his house a coat of paint.

Our Home Town was thrilled to see Dale Markland's picture in the paper last Saturday. Dal's parents are to be at Hill field to receive an award and commendation for the bravery of their son. More power to you, Dale.

Hats off to Hugh and Nellie Rawson for their three fine sons whose pictures appeared in the Sunday paper. We are sure our boys from Farr West will measure up to, if not excel, any in America.

Larene Taylor under stress, is sure some athlete. Her father was careless enough to leave his keys in the car and then leave the place with an army officer. Larene was in the house alone and heard the car start, she got to the kitchen window in time to see three Italian prisoners, who were working on George's farm, backing it out of the driveway. She flew through the house, sailed off the porch, across the lawn and over the fence, on to the running board of the car, reached in and grabbed the keys out and beat it back into the house. All this before the prisoners knew what was happening. She saw to it that the house was locked good, then those Italians getting sort of scared, pushed the car back in the yard and went back to work.

Larene hopes it taught her Dad a lesson. The moral of it is: Always keep your car locked, don't invite trouble. (May-Jun 1944)

Brown's corner has been one seething mass of activity the past ten days—pea season is in full swing, early and late everybody works to get them in during their highest juice content. Seth Murdock and family are stacking the vines and are beginning to look pretty tired. The whole town will be relieved when the harvest is over. (July 1943)

Harold Westergard is building a nice modern cement block service station and store in front of his mother's place on the new state highway. We wish Harold luck in his venture. (Dec 1944)

During the war years those homes which had a representative serving in the armed forces displayed a special flag on the front door. A blue star was placed on the flag for each member of the family who had joined a branch of the armed forces. When a family was notified that one of their sons had lost his life in service to his country, a gold star replaced the blue one. (See below for an illustration of the men wearing the uniforms of the various branches of the service and of a service-related flag displayed in the home.)

Fire Destroys Old Land Mark

Sunday morning, February 13, at one a. m. our ward amusement hall burned to the ground. Nothing left but an ash heap and two lumps of melted iron where the stoves used to be. A pretty hot time for Mavis Dickemore and the close neighbors while it lasted.

We have our regrets to see the old hall pass out of our sight. It has stood there for 53 years and we hold many fond memories that were enjoyed in the old building. It was as old as our ward, built in 1891 while Bishop Andrew Taylor was presiding, and I am sure we recall the many fine times we spent there both in recreation and spiritual training.

Since that time there has been five Bishops preside over the ward: W. J. McEntire, James Martin, Moroni Chugg, Lorenzo Taylor and A. D. Brown.

In 1910 the hall was remodeled. A hardwood floor put in and the stage and scenery built. I recall some of the finest times of my life spent in that old hall. And I am sure you will remember some of them. Such as the old Farr West brass band practices and dramatic shows. When Charles Owens, Lem Brown, Clarence Stephensen, Charles Groberg, Ervin Higley, Charlie Smith and dozens of others who took part in various activities.

We can never forget Uncle Sam Tomlinson who directed so many of those old theatricals.

The many good times the scouts have had in putting off their stunts and competitive games, the good eats that have been served there hundreds of times by our sisters and our mothers. The old ward Christmas trees and family reunions. God bless its memory. I am sure a lot of sentiments went up in smoke when the old hall burned. But like everything, we come and go, serving our bit then passing on. It is hoped that we as individuals serve as well as the old hall did and be remembered as long. (Feb 1944)

Members who own an interest in the corn chopping machine have called a meeting to arrange cutting their corn silage for the dairy cattle this winter. Now so much of our help is in the service of our country the men are forced to stick together and form a "help one another club" that the harvesting of the crops can be carried on.

John Chugg met up with an accident, poor fellow. He fell off a horse and broke his good leg. Now he is hopping around on a pair of wooden ones. It surely is hard luck for this time of the year when one needs to work his farm. It says somewhere in the good old book that "The Lord loves those whom He chasteneth," so John must be loved a lot by the Lord. (Apr 1945)

Well, fellows you wouldn't know the old school grounds. We have had the big scraper at work and it is all leveled up and I see that Bro. James Martin was drilling Barley in, as I passed today. It looks fine and the priesthood has cooperated in getting it ready for planting. The ward is using it for a Welfare Project, in connection with a piece of land Bro. Frank Painter has donated to raise sugar beets on. Bishop Davis has put in a lot of time in getting this project in shape, and we hope it will give results this fall. (Apr 1945)

The Ward Reunion held in March was a big success, held at the Wahlquist School. There was a record attendance. Program, dinner and dance were enjoyed by all. In spite of rationing the meal was a regular banquet. Each family was charged $2.50. All expenses were paid with a few dollars to the good. (Apr 1945)

The main high-way passing the ward church is fast nearing completion and it will be a honey. The fences are all cleared and the ditches and drains being tiled and cemented gives it a clean and wholesome appearance. Boys, you won't know the old place when you return. (Sep 44)

Roger K. Petersen is shown here unveiling the monument memorializing Farr West servicemen in the Farr West City Park in 1976.

World War II brought other changes into community life. The building of defense installations in the Ogden area (Hill Field--September 7, 1940, Ogden Arsenal--revitalized September 1, 1936; and Utah General Depot, later called Defense Depot Ogden--September 15, 1941) attracted quite a significant number of people of varying skills and abilities. Many Farr West residents (women as well as men) joined the workforce at one of these installations. The shifting of employment to defense installations and the induction of so many men into the armed forces depleted the farm labor supply to the point that local farmers had to join together in small groups for mutual assistance in harvesting crops. In addition, migrant labor was brought in to do some of the work, particularly thinning and hoeing sugar beets and harvesting farm produce. For a short time Italian and German prisoners of war that were housed at Utah General Depot also were used for some farm labor. (Interesting note: one Italian POW married a Utah girl and together they raised their family in Farr West.)

Education

On August 5, 1872 a school meeting was called to consider a new schoolhouse in western part of Harrisville. The Harrisville Ward historical record adds the reason--"here being 132 children." A decision was made at the meeting to levy a tax of one percent to build a school and one percent to buy fuel and pay the trustees. A frame building measuring 18 x 36 feet and located on the north side of the present community park in the center of town, was constructed under the direction of Richard D. Brown and the trustees. (See Artist Don Ellis' drawing of this building below.)

In the summer of 1873 Mrs. Eliza Smith taught school in the new frame building. Samuel N. Hiatt taught during the following winter. He was followed in turn by Lenora Rawson the next summer. George Bramwell, Sr., taught during the winter of 1874-75. The school trustees at that time were Thomas D. Brown, Peter Later and Noel L. Shurliff. Stephen F. Wilson taught school during the winter of 1875.

The year 1880 brought the completion of a new red brick school building in Farr West. This one-room structure, measuring 42 x 26 feet, cost $2,500. At the dedication one of the speakers remarked that the building was an ornament to the community. The frame schoolhouse that had been used previously was moved about one-half mile east to become part of the home of Thomas D. Brown. An addition was later made to the brick building.

School in the red brick building was conducted quite differently from the modern school. Approximately 120 students were enrolled in this earlier school, ranging from those who were learning their ABC's to those who were on the fifth reader. No grades were established.

Some of the teachers in the new red brick building included Joseph Sidwell, Ella Windrow, Carrie Canfield, Julia Hawkes, John Rawson, Ephraim Bird, Sarah Hawkes, Mattie Dye, Benjamin J. Critchlow, Lorenzo Waldrom, Riley Dixon, Levi Taylor, Mormon Cragun and Newell Taylor. Inga Hegsted taught the lower grades in the winter of 1891-92. Mary Taylor taught from 1897 to 1902 and Enoch Groberg taught about this same time.

In 1872 the first Sunday School of West Harrisville was organized as a branch school under the direction of Superintendent Peter Later of Harrisville. William J. Larkin, chosen as acting superintendent, served with assistants William D. Pritchett and James Martin. This West Harrisville locality became a separate district of Harrisville. Thomas J. White acted as presiding officer of the district until his death on July 17, 1885, when he was succeeded by William C. Rawson.

In 1914 the red brick school had become too small to meet the community needs. The first and second grades were being conducted in the basement of the ward meetinghouse. That summer a new, four-room yellow brick school was constructed. It remained in use until consolidation of some county schools was begun in December 1928.

The principals of this elementary school were as follows: Mrs. Applegate, 1914-15; Mr. Smith, 1915-16a; Mrs. Jesse Morgan, 1916-1917; Mrs. Naomi Stern., 1917-18; Douglas Brian, 1918-1921; Charles Owen, 1921-24; John C. Neal, 1924-26;; Arthur C. Taylor, 1926-29; A. D. McKee, 1929-30; Leland W. Rhees, 1930-33; Lawrence W. Jenkins, 1933-34; and Alysses Mortensen, 1934 to the time the building was abandoned.

On September 28, 1939 the Farr West Elementary School property was transferred to the Farr West Ward from the Weber County Board of Education following the removal of the yellow brick schoolhouse. The school property was used to raise sugar beets for Church Welfare purposes the next year. The property underwent two separate leveling projects on successive years before being established as a community park. Arrangements were made to support the park financially through taxation of property owners when the Farr West Community Park District was established in 1977.

In 1941 the new Wahlquist Elementary School began to accommodate the children of the community. Located in the southeast extremity of the community, it provided improved facilities for education. This school was later dedicated as a junior high school on 28

December 1950.

(Special arrangements were made with the Weber County School District for the Farr West Ward to hold special programs, reunions and dances at Wahlquist until the ward chapel was remodeled and enlarged in 1959.) Elementary school children then attended Plain City Elementary School until the new Farr West Elementary School on 2700 North Street was dedicated 13 Sep 1984.

When building of the new Farr West elementary school on 2700 North; Street was being planned in 1984, one requirement that was levied on the city was to install sidewalks for the safety of children walking to and from the school. These lovely new sidewalks were later used consistently by students who live near the school, but when local newspapers began to report kidnappings and other related crimes near schools, many parents became so concerned that they began to use their family vehicles to deliver their children right to the school in the morning and pick them up at the end of the school day. The new sidewalks soon became a convenient exercise/jogging path for people from near and far.

Transportation

The first settlers in this area who were not content to walk wherever they went depended on horsepower--either simply riding on horseback or using the animals to pull carts or buggies (below left), surreys, or white-top buggies (below right).

Niels Peter Lee became the proud owner of the first bicycle in the community. It was much like the modern ones except that it had a double tube.

During the early days in Farr West when a resident needed to travel from one place to another and had no vehicle, he simply walked. In bad weather these pedestrians who had to use poor roads grew used to having muddy shoes or boots. The author, who walked one-quarter mile to school, frequently had to dodge mud puddles in the road. In colder weather the frozen puddles made interesting places to smash the thin ice coverings. In the summer the county road department sent a grader occasionally to smooth the roads' surface. Dusty roads generated the need for "water wagons" to sprinkle the country roads so residents did not have to endure occasional clouds of dust.

In about 1930 Farr West got its first taste of paved roads when West Harrisville Road was paved as far west as about 1800 West. Gradual change brought paving to all roads in the town.

When Napoleon McEntire bought a Ford, he introduced gas-powered vehicles into the community. The Model-T Ford (see photo at left) was being sold in this country between 1908 and 1927. The author vaguely remembers his father's owning one of these modern miracles. Occupants of the car enjoyed fresh air in the summer time. However, in cold weather the occupants of the vehicle had to attach side-curtains and take along some warm lap robes to be comfortable during any journey along the highways.

In 1896 the Southern Pacific Railroad laid out and built their railroad through the eastern part of the community just east of the Dudley Chase farm and north to the Utah Hot Springs. Approximately 3,000 Chinese laborers worked between Ogden and Brigham City, using shovels and wheelbarrows to build the railroad grade. This railroad line later acquired the name Oregon Shortline. The OSL was independent for a short period of time until October 1898 when the newly reformed Union Pacific Railroad took control of a majority of the board of directors. During the early part of the 20th century the railroad publicized tours of Yellowstone National Park by way of a spur constructed from Idaho Falls, Idaho to West Yellowstone, Montana. In 1938, Union Pacific began consolidating operations and leased for operation a number of its subsidiaries including the Oregon Short Line. The railroad operated under the lease until December 30, 1987, when the OSL was fully merged into the Union Pacific Railroad.

Transportation improvement for Farr West came in 1909 with the building of a railroad from Ogden to Plain City. By 1911 a branch of the Washington Avenue Steam Line was in operation. It followed a route along

Harrisville Road from Five Points to the Harrisville Brickyard, thence west to Plain City. An engine, coal car and passenger car made three trips daily. The train was called the Plain City Dummy (because in the 1890s the Salt Lake and Ogden Railway was started with dummy streetcars, small steam locomotives that resembled regular electric streetcars) and the line was called the Ping-pong. About 1916 this service was taken over by an electric car line operated by the Utah-Idaho Central Railroad until passenger traffic was discontinued in 1935. Freight deliveries continued a few years longer.

Left, the electric passenger car; right, the school bus that succeeded it in Weber County. The author remembers how the yellow buses saved time by taking a more direct route to school, rather than having to ride the train into Ogden at 24th street and just west of Grant Avenue, then walk east to Washington, where students had to wait for an electric streetcar to carry them north to Weber High School at 11th and Washington Boulevard. In the afternoon the process was reversed, where students had to wait at the Bamberger station for the scheduled departure of the electric car for Plain City.

During World War II and later, Farr West residents saw an increasing number of semi-trucks routed through this area. Development of the interstate freeway after 1964 spawned a seemingly endless number of trucking firms, which in time made inroads into the railroads' business.

When a decision was made by the government to construct a freeway that involved a routing through Farr West, citizens endeavored to get planners to consider going further west to disrupt fewer homes and farms. Those who were planning the construction prepared a special display in Ogden to explain their reasoning for announced plans, which emphasized economic advantage to businesses in the Ogden area. When appraisers began contacting Farr West residents to indicate what was being offered for their real estate (including one home), this author arranged a town meeting to consider a course of action. A personal lawyer friend of this writer was invited to attend the meeting and give advice on the matter. Since the initial offers that had been made for land acquisition seemed ridiculously low, the lawyer recommended taking the matter to court. He had been particularly successful previously in his service on such matters, so the individual court cases were arranged. This writer's court case, which was the first to be scheduled, resulted in a payment of three times the original offer. Even then no extra payment was allowed for the fact that the freeway took the middle third of the farm, requiring the property owner to travel an extra half-mile each week to obtain irrigation water for his farm. The legal action did set a precedent, which brought some benefit to those whose court cases followed. Construction of the interstate highway proceeded as planned.

Initially the volume of traffic on the completed freeway seemed insignificant. However, it continued to grow (along with a much heavier traffic flow along 2700 North Street when this street was extended almost straight east to North Ogden.)

See the above photos of traffic on 2700 North (left) and I-15 (right) on a normal day. The volume of traffic on 2000 West Street exploded whenever traffic on the freeway was shut down, usually because of a traffic accident.

In an effort to reduce the noise problem for residents near I-15, sound barriers appeared along the freeway with increased frequency. Nearby residents began to complain at once about decreased visibility and the unsightly appearance of the wall. One wonders what the future might hold for complaints from freeway-related challenges.

Economic Developments

occasions.

Electrical service began in the community May 29, 1916 bringing improved lighting, then washing machines, irons, water systems and other conveniences. The author remembers that circa 1928 the family living room light was a single light globe (about 100 watts), hung from an electric cord in the center of the room, with a round white glass reflector about 10 inches in diameter located just above the light globe. When electric service was interrupted, the family resorted to use of the kerosene lamp. These lamps were also used to heat curling irons (see illustration at left), which ladies used to curl their hair when preparing for public meetings or other special

About 1910 George White built a store near the southeast corner of his lot near 2159 North 2000 West. In 1917 the store burned down. Prior to this time stores had been operated by William and Jane Rawson, Dudley Chase, Thomas D. Brown and Charles Littlewood. About 1930 Fawn Markland operated a gas station and candy store (see photo on left) at her home at about 1923 North 2000 West.

Data extracted from the biographies of the earliest settlers in the Farr West area indicate most of them depended upon agriculture for their sustenance. An event of significant economic importance to farmers was the the sugar beet industry in 1898 and the building of a factory in Wilson Lane by the Amalgamated Sugar Company. Beets from Farr West were delivered to the railroad in Harrisville. The price was $4.25 per ton. In those days before any special tools and equipment were developed, kitchen knives were used to thin the beets about six inches apart. Beets did not grow very large. When harvesting time came, kitchen knives were again used to cut off the beet tops as they were prepared for hauling to Harrisville.

memorable experience. Using short-handled hoes and bending over the rows, those who performed this operation had to have a lot of endurance as they thinned the beets about 12-14

Farmers in the area were pleased when special equipment was designed and built for planting, thinning, cultivating and harvesting the beets. Thinning the beets had always been a memorable experience. Using short-handled hoes and bending over the rows, those who performed this operation had to have a lot of endurance as they thinned the beets about 12-14 inches apart. Thinner had to exert a lot of self control to not stand frequently to rest their backs. Discipline, endurance and close attention enabled some thinners to finish almost a half-acre of beets in a day.

pull onto the weighing station for weighing, then pull up to a platform where cables and pulleys would lift one side of the wagon and dump the beets into a hopper. From there the beets were elevated to a structure where most of the soil and leaves were separated from the beets and dumped into a different "hopper." The emptied wagon or truck would then pull beneath the hopper and trip a lever which allowed the soil and leaves to be dumped back into the wagon for weighing again as "tares." The processed beets were loaded onto another elevator which dumped the beets into railroad cars. When railroad cars were not available, the beets would be hauled out west of the station and shoveled by hand onto a storage pile. Later in the season when railroad cars were available, the beets would be loaded onto wagons and again sent through the elevator into the waiting railroad cars. In later years the local beet dump was not used, so trucks would haul the beets directly to the Hot Springs weighing station or to the main factory on Wilson Lane. Even more recently the beets were delivered to a weighing station located on 2700 North Street at a location north of the Weber Industrial Park.

The early Farr West settlers had to raise what they ate. They grew hay and grain, and they kept a family garden. Likewise, they raised the beef and pork products that they consumed. Soon they began hauling these products from their home to ready customers in Ogden City. In time some farmers began growing such cash crops as onions, tomatoes, peas and potatoes. The passing of a few decades brought the demise of most smaller farms. By 2013 housing development and commercial enterprises have chipped away at farming land until the Dale Chugg and the Papageorge dairy operations are really the only large farms that still exist. Even the Lyle Dabb farm, which had a profitable business selling farm produce to ready customers, has found a more profitable venture in making and selling decorative wreaths.

The first post office in Farr West, after it became a separate community, was established in the home of Charles Smith in 1900. The first rural free delivery was carried by Henry Hall about 1905. Others who followed Mr. Hall were Mr. Kershaw, Charles Smith, Fred Kenley, LaVelle Butt, Fred Keeter, Deloss Bingham and Owen Stevens.

The year 1905 brought the introduction of the Independent Telephone with fifteen families signing contracts. These families were required to subscribe to company stock before getting service. During the same year the Faust Creamery Company erected a skimming station near the northeast corner of the intersection of 1800 North and 2000 West streets. After several years this venture was abandoned and the lot was sold to the Jensen Creamery Company on March 4, 1913.

In 1923 the building of a pea vinery by the Utah Packing Corporation on property now owned by the Papageorge Family brought real economic benefits to the numerous farmers in the community (See photo on left).

Older residents of Farr West still remember the long lines of horse-drawn wagons at the pea vinery, awaiting a turn to get their precious cargo threshed--also, the aroma of the stack of pea vines about a month later as the evening breeze from North Ogden Canyon spread the "ripe" odor westward across the community. This was followed the next year by organization of the first dairy cooperative in the area. The co-op built a skimming station on the north side of West Harrisville Road on property now owned by Delbert C. Dabb. This cooperative later incorporated as the Weber Central Dairy Association, which later evolved into Western General Dairies, Inc.

From humble beginnings in 1947 the Smith and Edwards store at the north end of Farr West has a fascinating history. Started by Lawrence Edwards and Bert Smith as a military surplus venture, this unique business venture has passed through three generations of the Smith family, expanding into a 171,000 square foot facility. It has included departments for camping, fishing, backpacking, climbing, caving, hunting, guns & ammo, emergency preparedness, an extraordinary selection of Dutch oven cookware, marine, water sports, western tack sales and manufacturing, western jewelry, clothing, coats, footwear, toys, housewares, hardware, automotive, paint, plus U. S. and international military surplus - all this in addition to the sixty acre yard which is filled with a variety of U.S. and international military surplus ...the "scrap" that started it all."

Proceeding south from Smith and Edwards, numerous commercial and professional enterprises greet the eye. Quite a number of them are scattered among the residential dwellings. Then as one travels east on the 2700 North Street, he encounters a Maverick service station that is said to rank as number one in business volume for that service chain in Utah. An enormous Associated Foods warehouse is situated just east of the freeway, besides several eating establishments; Farr West now boasts its first hotel, a Comfort Inn.

The year 1965 brought completion of the Willard Bay Canal through Farr West (see photo on left). Connecting the Weber River with the huge Willard Bay water storage and recreational facility, the project, which was directed by the Bureau of Reclamation, brought economic stimulus to the town's commercial enterprises. It also brought a significant increase in vehicular traffic through the town as various-sized boats were transported along 2000 West Street to and from Willard Bay.

In August 1958 Farr West obtained natural gas service; in that same year the Bona Vista Water Improvement District brought culinary water into the community, followed by Pine View Water Systems providing secondary water in 1982. January 4, 1968 heralded another significant change in the life pattern for Farr West residents, when the Farr West Sewer Improvement District was established. Joining with the Plain City Sewer Improvement District, this organization facilitated the installation of a sewer system that served approximately 180 connections in the Farr West area. (See photo below)

The author recalls one very unpleasant experience with the sewer system early in its history. It began when Allen Taylor turned off his irrigation ditch after finishing his turn on a Saturday night. Someone came along and removed the headgate for some strange reason. The stream of irrigation water overflowed into the sewer system, filling the pipe to capacity. It ran southward along 2000 West Street, then crossed that street at 1800 North, continued west until coming to a lift station that usually pumped water across the large canal. For the first time, this pump became clogged by an empty tin can, backing up the irrigation water in the sewer system so it flooded basements all along the southern end of 2000 West Street in Farr West.

Occupants of the author's home were unaware of the problem until one of the daughters sleeping in a basement bedroom got out of bed and stepped into 2-4 inches of water! House occupants sprang into action, but they were so grateful to have a good neighbor (Gary Brown) bring a pump on the job and stay until the water was removed. The family appreciated one thing: nearly all the overflow was irrigation water, so no odor lingered in the basement after cleanup was completed that Sunday morning.

The earliest sewer arrangement continued until Farr West broke away from Plain City Sewer Improvement District and signed a contract with Central Weber Sewer District on December 6, 1978. A new sewer line was immediately planned to serve homes and businesses along the western boundary of the community from 1900 North Street to the Central Weber sewer plant in Slaterville-Marriott.

Town Celebrations

Periodically through the years some red-letter days have "quickened the pulse" of town residents and added new meaning to the privilege of living in Farr West and in America. One type of celebration that the author recalls with fondness was the ward reunions that were held annually from the 1930's through the 1950's. Usually scheduled in the late winter season, these events provided an excellent opportunity for community members to socialize; too, they usually attracted former residents of the community as well. Years ago the event was a day-long event with programs in the morning and afternoon, magnificent family-style banquets at noon and in the evening, and a spirited dance that often lasted until midnight. In later years the increased tempo of living demanded that the celebration be confined to an evening event. Most recently the event included a lovely dinner (most usually served cafeteria style), an hour's program and a dance. While the programs have had varying degrees of local participation, those which were most memorable involved local talent of varied ages.

In the early years of the community the highlight of the summer season was the July celebrations. Shortly after 1900, according to early residents of the town, the celebration got underway in mid-morning with a program. In the afternoon the young folk looked forward to aces for each age group. An added attraction at times was three-legged races (two people who had their adjoining legs bound together as one) or sack races where the participants stepped into a burlap sack, held it up and hopped along the prescribed track. Ice cream, candy and soda pop were sold at a refreshment stand located in the grove of trees north of the frame meetinghouse. A baseball game in the afternoon often added excitement to the day's activities.

One of these celebrations rated special mention in recorded history. On July 24, 1905 the Farr West and Harrisville wards joined together under the direction of the two Sunday School Superintendents and their assistants. A procession formed at the Harrisville meetinghouse, led by John Larkin and William Lowder, marshals of the day. Following them came the "wild Indians," then the handcart company "crossing the dreary plains in a desolate condition, also the ox teams, horse and cow team, poor animals. . .with their dilapidated vehicles and traveling utensils made a fine display." The first 13 states of the union with the Goddess of Liberty were represented by 13 young ladies dressed in white, riding on a float decorated with the national colors, followed by 48 small girls in white dresses on another beautiful float, representing the 48 states. Many other fine floats followed the parade to the Farr West Ward grove. There a program occupied the forenoon. The afternoon activities consisted of "races and amusements of all kinds." The day was closed with a dance.

The year 1930 marked another red-letter day when Farr West "pulled out all of the stops" to celebrate July 24th in a fitting manner. Community members recalled pioneer days by staging an encounter between some pioneers and Indians. Perhaps the most dramatic moments of the "attack" by the Indians was the stealing of a pioneer girl (Gwen Kimose) by a wild Indian (Ether Taylor of Plain City) and the "scalping" of Amos Taylor from Harrisville by a tomahawk-bearing red man. To make the latter episode more realistic, one of the participants emptied a container of red beet juice over the head of Mr. Taylor (who did not have a hair on his head). He really looked horrible as the worst casualty of the day.

yellow brick school. Using some wild horses that Ether Taylor had herded in from the range, community members were given a real show.

An annual July 4th celebration was established in the community when the Farr West wards combined their efforts to make the day a red-letter one. Each year since that time the day's activities have included a flag raising ceremony; a luscious breakfast of hotcakes, ham and scrambled eggs, and a beverage; a parade began later in the morning (this writer twice had the honor of serving as grand marshal).

Concessions attracted many of the attendees throughout the day. Afternoon activities included

However, when a particularly accurate eye the ball-thrower to hit the bull's-eye, the person who dunked in the water had a jarring experience. After few years the activity was labeled inappropriate insofar as preserving the dignity of ward leaders.

Chairman Jerry Barnett arranged an outstanding program for the day. Before the main program of events started at the community center, members of the celebration committee drove around the town to observe which residents had their flags on display. These "early bird patriots" were each given a dollar coupon to be spent at the celebration.

The Bicentennial year celebration on Saturday, remembered. (See photo,

The flag-raising ceremony at the beginning of the day's festivities was conducted by the Boy Scouts from Troop 91 of the Ogden 48h Ward, dressed in elegant Minuteman uniforms of blue and white (photo, p. 68), and displaying in turn a number of flags having historical significance, while a recorded flag ceremony of music and historically interesting words was being played.

After enjoying a bounteous breakfast of ham, scrambled eggs and pancakes, preparations began for the biggest parade that the community had ever assembled. The town committee, through arrangements that had been made by Secretary Robert A. Hunter, borrowed a large float that had been made for Ogden City and with a special sign was made to represent the town committee. John A. Chugg (left), who had been appointed Grand Marshal of the parade, rode his horse and carried the U. S. flag. Zola C. Davis was honored to ride in the parade as Weber County Mother of the Year. A lovely assortment of mini-floats, decorated wagons, tricycles and bicycles, and finally the town junior posse, altogether made quite an impressive parade.

Following the parade, the crowds turned to the midway, partially shaded by three huge, colorful parachutes. A wind during the previous night had worried the celebration committee; a 1987 parade float and the colorful booths almost encountered a disaster, but everything turned out well. A variety of booths were in operation during the day. Lowell and Marian McEntire had a booth to sell Bicentennial hats, flags and some bicentennial plaques that had been made by the Dennis Massengales. A Bicentennial booklet had been prepared by Lorene M. Brown and printed for the day. A basketball toss, fish pond, muzzle-loading booth, ring toss, baked goods sale, and others kept the crowd entertained. One interesting note was recalled about the MIA Maids' hot scone booth. When the facilities at the booth couldn't keep up with the demand, a "shuttle" operation was instituted between the Barnett home and the park to speed up service. Other contests included a cake walk, coin scramble, baby contest, pie eating contest, cow milking contest, relay races, greased pig chase (Note: the pig got out of the human circle and raced ahead of the pursuing children down o the south side of the park before it was captured), pole climbing contest (in which Robin Barnett finally reached the $5 bill at the top of the pole) and others. One of the most interesting contests of the day was the use of two 4-wheel-steering vehicles provided by Roy Johnston and George Davila for the blindfolded driving contest. Couples competed in this contest, the man being blindfolded for driving, and the woman giving verbal instructions on how to drive around the tortuous course without knocking over any of the pegs. also, special rides were provided on ponies and carts and the 4-wheel-steering vehicles. Trophies were given for several of the contests, including a trophy to E. Lionel Brady for being the winner of the naming contest for this annual celebration (Farr West Freedom Festival).

The sizzling day caused the crowd to consume 40 gallons of punch, numerous cases of soda pop, and all the ice cream that was on hand. The Jerry Jensens set up their camper at the north of the midway, where they sold Chinese food, while others sold hamburgers and hot dogs to the hungry throng.

The celebration attracted not only community members, but also quite a number of travelers along Interstate 15, who noticed the crowd, got off the freeway an joined the throngs in celebrating the great day.

In the afternoon a softball game involved quite a number of participants from the youth and adult members of the community. Across the street in the LDS church the Kent Malans and Emeretta Westergard had arranged a display of antiques and heirlooms, including a spinning wheel that was owned by Mary Gould.

In the evening a delicious barbecued pork dinner topped off the day's activities for a hungry crowd. The celebration had been the biggest and best that the town had ever held, the kind that will linger in one's memory for years to come.

Farr West - the community with a Heart

16 Oct 1905 - On this evening a surprise party was held at the hall for the purpose of showing honor to Harvey Murdock as he was about to leave the ward. A few speeches and songs were rendered, a picnic was enjoyed, and the younger folks enjoyed a short period of dancing. Brother Murdock had lived on his farm for about 37 years.

During the last week in March 1906 ward members were very generous in donating their labor to move a small house and remodel it for Sarah C. Burnett, who was "in destitute circumstances." It was built on Reuben L. Short's property. With busy times rushing the brethren, the completion of the house was delayed a short time.

After the San Francisco quake on 18 Apr 1906, many of the cities of the country gave a helping hand. Our ward was called upon to provide some provisions, a project which was done in haste to relieve the suffering. Value of donations was $30.

2 Jul 1906 - Many of the brethren and boys turned out and gave their support in helping hoe the beets and haul the hay for Millie Taylor. She was the widow of Bishop William A. Taylor and her son Riley was on a mission. "A good day's work was done."

27 Dec 1932 - Many ward members went to the Farr West beet dump and hauled beets from the pile to load in railroad cars. The Amalgamated Sugar Company paid 16 cents a ton for hauling the beets, so $64 was earned that day, which was given to N. Lee D. Brown, who was going on a mission to the Eastern States Jan. 9th. The people of the ward also donated about $96 in cash.

On 16 and 17 Oct 1933 the people of the ward harvested about 6 acres of sugar beets for Charles F. Larkin, whose wife was very sick.

During the week of 22 Mar 1936 the High Priest Quorum helped Charles F. Larkin with his spring work and the Seventies helped Lemuel D. Brown, who was ill. Charles Larkin was in the hospital. During June the ward donated about 30 8-hour days to Joseph Stephenson and Charles Larkin in harvesting their first crop of hay.

During June 1937 the 60th Quorum of Seventy and other volunteers assisted George Davis in hoeing his sugar beets and harvesting the first crop of hay. Even though they were busy themselves, the men donated approximately 40 days' work to George, who had been badly injured when his horses ran away with him while hauling dirt with his wagon and dump boards.

Dec 1939 - Several days were spent by the different priesthood quorums helping Chester O. Garlick erect a basement home.

9 Mar 1940 - When the Joseph Stephenson home was destroyed by fire, the priesthood quorums joined in cleaning up the debris and helping the family to get settled in part of Arthur Crane's home. The Relief Society also collected $100, which was given the Stephensons.

3 Jul 1940 - Under the chairmanship of Charles H. Murdock, the sugar beets and potatoes of Herbert D. Brown were hoed, since he was ill and unable to work.

23 Apr 1941 - The Melchizedek Priesthood brethren hauled 125 loads of fertilizer, then plowed and harrowed 10 acres of round for Earl Thomas, who had been injured and was unable to do his spring work.

12 Jan 1949 - When fire partially destroyed the home of Richard Groberg, the ward came to the assistance of the family, donating $239 to help him begin rebuilding.

6 Dec 1949 - A work project was organized at the farm of Dee D. Brown, who had been ill for some time and was unable to take care of his work.

18 Sep 1958 - When Klee A. Taylor died while driving his auto along Hi-way 84, ward members helped his father Allen harvest his corn for silage.

5 Jun 1970 - When Bishop Brian L. Taylor's family was involved in a horrific automobile accident south of Cedar City, both parents were hospitalized for approximately two months. The five youngest of their children were accepted into the home of the Harold A. Westergard. Neighbors and friends assisted by bringing in food, taking the laundry, etc. So much food was accumulating that after a few days the Relief Society was asked to designate which among the volunteers should bring in food each day. A list of donations of food, money, and services was kept until the Taylors were back in "running order," (just over two months later) at which time 182 entries had been made on the list.

28 Apr 1979 - After Bishop Dale J. Chugg's $30,000 loss in a hay shed fire, ward members donated $2,526 and assisted in rebuilding and painting the hay shed.

4-H Club Activities

One primary reason has led to devoting a special section of this history to 4-H activities: Farr West leads all communities in the State of Utah in the number of young people sent to the national 4-H conventions and contests at Chicago, Illinois. Information for this section has been provided by Mary P. Kogianes and Utah Extension Service.

According to the records in the USU Extension Service Office, the first 4-H Club here was organized in 1928 with Nona E. Brown as a leader. Six girls were enrolled in both the foods and clothing categories.

In 1933 Oretta Chugg organized another club for making clothing with 7 girls participating.

In 1939 Nathan Chugg and Allen E. Taylor were leaders of a livestock club with six boys participating in dairy, beef and lamb projects.

Other clubs were organized, continuing in various projects. In 1940 John A. Chugg organized a diversified livestock club with 12 members. This club with various members continued for 25 years.

The first joint community activity for boys and girls was held in 1943. This was a scrap drive. The parents and leaders drove trucks throughout the community and asked the people to give them all their old scrap iron materials. This was during World War II, when the nation needed all the metals they could get to further the war effort. The activity had a two-fold purpose: first, it cleaned the yards of the community, and second, the scrap was sold for a handsome price, which financed judging tours and social events held by the 4-H participants.

In 1944 a paper drive was conducted. Once again a parent drove a truck while the excess magazines and newspapers of the community were gathered and sold. From these funds the members enjoyed a swimming party.

In 1959, 4-H leaders Delmar White, Norma White, Jack Gordon, Irene Groberg and Mary Kogianes started a community development project. Having a community park was very essential since young people needed a place to play ball or have other outdoor recreation. Many meetings were held and activities planned to help earn money to establish this park. A tract of land that once held the Farr West Schoolhouse was just lying idle in the center of town. It was rocky, weedy and unsightly. Investigation revealed that this land had been deeded to the community in 1941 by the Weber County Board of Education. Our first big problem was solved. We did have the land. Now it must be improved.

The first fund raising event was held on January 15, 1959. A Swiss steak dinner was served, which brought in a total of $166.09. On March 3, 1959 the land was leveled by Dean McFarland at a cost of $309.00 (his price was for his cost of fuel only). Upon learning that we had not made enough money from the dinner to pay for the entire cost of leveling, Alex Papageorge picked up the rest of the tab of $142.90 to reimburse Dean McFarland for his expenses.

On April 24th of that same year an International Farm Youth Exchange student was invited to come and give an account of his experiences in Italy. Refreshments were sold to a capacity crowd, bringing in a total of $148.73 profit. (An interesting note: the money came from selling root beer and popcorn only. The committee hooked up a fan and blew the aroma of freshly popped popcorn into the crowd to increase sales.)

In June 1959 the County Extension staff was kind enough to let Farr West sponsor the annual Spring Fun Party--a county-wide event--with all proceeds going to the Farr West Park fund. A total of $125.57 was derived from this party. In November of 1959 a Little Buckaroo Rodeo was held at the coliseum with total proceeds of $60.00 going to the Farr West Park fund.

In the spring of 1960 a water right was obtained, and grain was planted on the park to make a little more profit. The Weber County Weed Department sprayed the grain for weeds that year in order to help eradicate the abundance of weeds. After the grain was harvested, the 4-H'ers met and picked up rocks to help get the ground clear for the planting of grass. Again in the spring of 1961 before the grass was planted, 4-H'ers once again picked up rocks. In April 1961 grass was planted. The 4-H'ers helped prepare the ground. A fine crop of grass began to show and everything looked very promising. In November of 1961 $70.00 worth of bonds was turned over to the 4-H clubs of Farr West by Allen E. Taylor, Secretary of the 18-38 Club. This group, who were not qualified for military service, wanted to have a memorial erected to their friends and neighbors who had gone into the service of our country. The 4-H clubs agreed to make arrangements for the memorial to be erected on the community for World War II veterans.

In the spring of 1964 the right-of-way for Interstate 15 highway took the east end of the park. For a time the park lay idle, since some members of the community felt that the park was too small for a ball diamond. Then in 1971 Town Councilman Delmar White made the park a community project and organized a Community Park Committee. Then the entire community united to finish the project. A pavilion was built, recreation equipment purchased, and the 4H clubs built a fireplace and erected the plaque in memory of the men who served in World Wars I and II. Names of all the men who lived in Farr West and served in those wars appear on the plaque.

With the park's being finished, 4-H continued to flourish in Farr West. Over the years the community has produced several champion citizens, who won trips to the National 4-H Club Congress in Chicago, as follows:

- 1942 - Stanley Groberg - Dairy demonstration
- Kenneth Schoonmaker - Dairy demonstration
- 1947 - Dale Chugg - Electricity
- 1948 - Jimmie Papageorge - Safety
- 1950 - Jay Davis - Tractor
- 1951 - Denis Petersen - Tractor

Changes in Just a Century of Farr West Growth

In 1980 the compiler decided to conduct a study of the changes in the complexion of the heads of families during the previous century. Of course, in 1880 Farr West was primarily a farming community. A century later the compiler, in attempting to get information about the heads of families, obtained the following data (incomplete):

Category	No.	Category	No.	Category	No.
Retirees	48	Unemployed	3	Educators	8
Widows	14	Truck drivers	6	Orthodontist	1
Federal Employees:		Auto service	7	Medical researcher	1
-Hill AFB	26	Tractor service	1	Nurses	2
- Defense Depot Ogd	14	Refrigeration	2	Accountants	3
-Internal Revenue Srv.	3	Custodial work	2	Salesmen	3
-Others	2	Welders	3	Sales clerk	1
State,County employees	6	Electrician	1	Student	2

Building trades	10	Manufacturing	1	Plumbers	3
Railroad employees	4	Ski resort work	1	Receptionist	2

Other interesting facts:

Of 194 heads of families (excluding widows)
 3 were widowers
 6 were single men
 18 were single women

Of married couples--
 44 wives employed full time outside of home
 4 wives employed part time outside of home
 2 wives had paying jobs in the home

The majority of wage earners had vocations which were unheard of a century ago. Here are a few:

Cartographer	Production controller	Oil truck driver	Youth coordinator
Computer specialist	Electroplater	State adjudicator	Youth probationer
Refrigeration specialist	Mobile home salesman	Missile electronics specialist

Memory's Miscellanea

When the Farr West Ward was organized on 30 Nov 1890, it belonged to the Weber Stake. When the North Weber Stake was organized 2 Aug 1908, Farr West became part of that stake. On 18 Jan 1942 Farr West was included in the new Farr West Stake. It became part of the newly organized Plain City Stake 30 Oct 1977. When that stake was divided in December 2000, the name "Farr West Stake" was reassigned to the town of Farr West. Then on 14 Jun 2012 the Farr West Utah Poplar Stake was created. At that time the new stake and the Farr West Utah Stake both contained some Plain City members.

Prices of real estate have raised so much in recent years. Going back to pioneer times, earliest settlers bought land from the government for $1.25 per acre. In 1978 some building lots sold for $25,000 per acre. By 2013 some commercial land sites had been priced at $160,000 per acre!

Mary Louetta Rawson, daughter of Arthur M. Rawson (he was born in 1840), recalled, "Grandfather Rawson did not want any of the Rawson girls curling their hair, so Father was very strict about how we dressed and wore our hair. I wanted to curl my hair as the other girls did, so one evening I put my hair in curlers. It was time for family prayers when I had finished. When I marched into the room with the curlers in my hair, Father said, "What's the matter with your hair, daughter? March right into your room and take them out." The family waited for me while I took the curlers out and combed my hair back the way it should be."

In cases of illness the early settlers used such home remedies as warm onion syrup, flaxseed and honey, castor oil and turpentine, or kerosene and sugar. It makes one wonder whether the treatment scared people into getting well.

After her marriage on Nov. 1, 1875, Emma Jane Taylor Baird would churn butter and deliver it to her regular customers in Ogden. Also, from them she would pick up their laundry, bring it home with her, wash it on the wash board, iron it by hand and take it back to her customers the next week when she delivered their butter.

In 1878 James Henry Taylor went to Montana to seek employment. He got a job herding cattle. He often thought of his family at home, for his mother's health had been poor and she had lost three children during the space of seven years. James had lost touch with his family and friends while working in the Montana "wilderness." Finally in the fall of 1881 he decided to return to his home in what is now Farr West. He got off the train in Harrisville and walked westward to his home. Along the way he stopped to visit with the Arthur M. Rawson family. They did not have the heart to tell him that his mother had been buried three months previously. He did not learn of the sad event until he reached his old home.

Dora E. Taylor Bates (born 1885) stated, "We never put up our fruit like the people do today. We dried all of our fruit in those days. Our young people would meet together and the boys that had apple peelers would peel the fruit and us girls would have to core the fruit and get it ready to be dried, then the boys would put it out and dry it. I can remember the first fruit that we ever bottled. We would put it in the jars; we had little lids to go over them, and then we'd heat wax and pour it over the bottle lids. Then when we opened the bottle, we would have to break the wax to get it out."

About 1880 one of the few social activities of the young people in Farr West was to visit houses in the community on Christmas Eve, calling out, "Christmas gift." Silas D. Rawson recalled how his Uncle William and Aunt Jane Rawson would throw peanuts on the floor of their general store and smile as they watched the children scramble for them.

In the years before 1890 when the anti-polygamy crusade crashed down on the Daniel Rawson family, both Daniel and Mary Melvina were charged and fined. Their sons were determined to somehow raise the money to pay the fines. Their son Silas asked some relatives for a loan but was refused. Then he and his mother decided that Silas would have to sell his team of horses. He had been offered $500 for them. He loved his horses, so his heart was breaking at the thought of selling them. In Ogden, Corey Brothers bought one horse for $175, but he would not buy the other, a mare, Silas rode the mare home and then Mary Melvina sold six heifers for $150, which was only about half of what they were worth. Even though this was a great sacrifice for the family, they did have the joy of seeing their dear father, who was then over 60 years old, come home from prison a free man. He had been in prison for six months. They had shaved off his fine beard, his health was broken, and he never saw another well day before his death on 18 Feb. 1892.

At the conclusion of the Utah War in 1858, the settlers returned to their homes. (This is reportedly the year that Farr West was first settled.) That year the harvest was rather poor and food was scarce. People lived mainly on roots and greens with what little wheat they had to eat. When the wheat was gone, they used barley. This made black, heavy cakes and bread, but even that tasted good to the hungry settlers. When grain was ripe the next year, every head was gathered carefully. Mary Melvina Taylor recalled that she and her sister Clarissa gleaned grain in the fields, following the men who cut the grain. When the threshing was finished, the two girls were proud to learn that they had gleaned five bushels of the precious grain.

One day Daniel B. Rawson, district president, came to Joseph Allen Taylor and asked him to give the east five acres of his farm to a Wilson family that had just moved into the valley and had no home. He hated to part with his best land, but did so. Several years later he was able to buy the property back for $1,000.

Mary Melvina Taylor Rawson remembered the day when she had only one suit of underwear and one dress, and would have to wash them at night so they would be clean and ready to wear next morning.

An example from the life of James Henry Taylor illustrates how the community residents lived during the 1880s. He brought his radiant bride into their lovely (by pioneer standards) home. Jim and Millie planted a lovely garden every year, raised chickens and kept cows for obtaining milk to sell and to make butter for sale. They also grew hay, grain and potatoes on their farm. The family was almost self sustaining, also making cider and vinegar. They kept bees for honey, raised their own meat animals, curing and smoking the meat to preserve it. They also made soap from the fat taken from the meat.

Jethro D. Brown (born 1879) wrote "When I was 8 to 12 years old, I had my first job. It was sweeping the school for 5 cents a day. After the first year a new room was built on and my wages were raised to eight cents a day."

Niels Peter Lee, an early missionary of the new Farr West Ward, had departed for the Southern States 14 Sep 1891 and returned 27 Oct 1893.

Alta Lund (born 1890) stated that her mother had told her about her father freighting supplies to Canada from Utah. At times he would be gone all summer on his business.

About the turn of the century Philomela Taylor took her eight-year old twins to Ogden with her when she took her daughters Eliza and Ida into town, where the older girls sewed for a lady in a dress shop during the winter. The twins, Iriminda and Ixivinda, were fascinated to watch a man with a horse and buggy stop at each street light. Taking out his long ladder, he would climb up and light each coal oil street light in turn.

According to Iriminda T. Stephenson, a traveling dentist used to come through this area and stop at the homes to see if anyone needed his services. He did dental work for missionaries' wives and widows' families free of charge. Some children got wise and hid when he made his appearance.

In reminiscing about the small stores that had been operated in Farr West in the early 1900s, Eli A. McEntire recalled the Littleton store that was located on Farr West Drive about a block east of the present chapel. Eli could remember waiting for a hen to lay an egg so he could take it to the store to buy some licorice. He also remembered buying kerosene by the quart for the lamps in their home.

On 1 June 1905 the Faust Creamery Company completed their skimming station "at the crossroads" in Farr West, ready to open for business. A large gathering assembled at its opening, where refreshments were served to the invited guests.

Grant H. Williams, while reflecting upon early memories of Farr West, recalled that sometime after 1906 he could remember an adobe house east of the Williams farm. The old home was said to have belonged to a family named Pritchett.

The year 1907 was known as the big flood year. Rain fell for five days. This, along with twenty-two inches of snow already on the ground, proved a threat to all the homes in the entire valley.

William Van Komen, who migrated from his native Holland to Utah, came to Farr West about 1908. Dutch was the common language spoken in the home. When he was asked to pray or administer to the sacrament in church meetings, he willingly responded, but spoke in Dutch.

William Van Komen was a very thrifty person. After his death July 7, 1938, his grandson, Mavous Dickamore, helped dig up a gallon bucket that was nearly filled with gold coins. The grandfather had buried it beneath the nests in his chicken coop. He had paid his tithes in gold and had saved gold, because those coins were smaller and worth more than other money.

In August and September 1934 Ernest L. Jensen supervised the digging of a well in back of the brick Farr West Church to use for watering the shrubs and lawn around the church. At that time a group of men also built a beautiful pipe fence with brick and concrete posts in front of the church. All labor was furnished by members, mostly after dark with artificial lighting.

In September 1936 the Ward Budget System was inaugurated. Tickets were printed and sold to ward members to raise operating funds for the ensuing year.

On 28 September 1938 the Farr West school grounds were purchased by the Farr West Ward from the Weber County School Board for $10 to be used for recreational purposes for the community. Some time later the service of county equipment was secured by the Ward Beautification Committee for planting trees and grass to begin a community park.

In 1939 the Amalgamated Sugar Company donated the local beet dumping ground and scales to the Farr West Community. The ground upon which the scales were located was retained for community use, but the remaining ground was sold to the highest bidder.

In March 1940 the Elders fenced and plowed part of the old school grounds and planted sugar beets for a welfare project.

On 31 March 1940 in the Church Welfare Program of the ward, the Elders were assigned potatoes, the Seventies sugar beets, and the High Priests peas. The three quorums worked together to supply the designated amounts of produce, which were donated by the various members from their own fields.

When truck loads of "fragrant" beet pulp traveled north along Highway 84 in winter or spring, home owners along the highway could tell what had passed without even glancing toward the highway.

Farr West residents remember Si Taylor's old swimming hole by the Plain City Canal in which many of the young folks learned how to swim..

Halloween Night used to bring a relocation of gates, carts, wagons, and of course much of the outdoor "plumbing" in Farr West.

Henry McEntire's orchard northeast of the Farr West School somehow tempted many elementary school students during recess time.

In bygone days in the Farr West Ward church service, the sacrament water was passed from one person to another in one large glass. The young folks shuddered at the thought of sitting down the row from any mature male member who wore a mustache,.

Young folk used to joke about a very hunch-backed man who was so bent over that he had to remove a floorboard from his vehicle to see where he was going along the highway (just a little exaggerated, of course).

During Pioneer days parades in Ogden, Pearl Martin loved to ride side-saddle, wearing her long dress and plumed hat.

Neighbors of George B. Taylor occasionally were awakened at any hour of the night when he had a question about his irrigation water concerns on any of his three farms.

If anyone needed to be convinced of the dangers of imbibing alcoholic beverages, they need only recall the time when a Plain City man weaved eastward along 1800 North Street and left the road right at the location where Hugh Rawson was trying to help a man with a stalled car. Poor Hugh lost a leg from his injuries.

One early-day farmer learned the dangers of taking a little extra water outside his regular turn. When his neighbor caught him in the act, an argument ensued and the offender got thrown into the full irrigation ditch.

The winter of 1947 brought near-record snowfall for Farr West. Homeowners got plenty of exercise plowing roadways and shoveling paths around their property.

On 29 August 1949, ward residents took a definite stand against the possibility of issuance of a license for the sale of intoxicants in Farr West. As a result of this action, approximately 90 people met with the county commissioners to protest such a possibility. A few days later the application by a community member for such a permit was denied by the commissioners.

On 19 October 1950 58 tons of sugar beets were harvested from the ward welfare farm in one day. On 18 October ward members harvested 200 bags of potatoes for the Church Welfare Plan.

On 19 October 1960 the potato harvest on the ward welfare farm resulted in an excess of 13,475 pounds of potatoes over the amount assessed the ward, resulting in a profit of $303.78.

On 8 Feb 1951 a special meeting was held to organize a committee to represent our community in relation to changes that might arise when the Interstate Freeway was to be routed through the town.

The year 1963 brought tragedy to two Farr West families. On July 19th Roger Foster, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Elon Foster, was drowned in the Blackfoot Reservoir in Idaho. He had planned to be married on July 20th. Some friends had persuaded him to go fishing, so they were on the reservoir when a wind arose and swamped the boat. Roger could not swim, so he drowned.

Then on October 12th W. Lynn Jensen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wilford A. Jensen, died of an accident at a private rodeo in Pleasant View. Lynn had just finished a ride on a bucking steer and jumped off the animal just at the same instant that the animal swung his head around and pierced Lynn with its horn.

On 20 Aug 1968 a bond election was held for installation of a sewer system in the community.

Residents along 1800 North Street frequently saw a very short woman from Plain City who had to look through the "spokes" of the steering wheel while driving her vehicle to and from Ogden.

The "grand opening" of the new restrooms at the community park was held Sunday, 1 July 1973. Following sacrament meeting in the Farr West 1st Ward, those who desired could inspect the new facility.

During September 1973 a new telephone exchange was placed in operation, which caused Farr West residents west of the freeway to have a new 731- prefix instead of the 782- prefix that characterized the North Ogden exchange.

The new Weber High School in Pleasant View was dedicated 28 March 1974. The new Weber High Seminary building was dedicated 5 May 1974 by Elder Ezra Taft Benson.

On 15 April 1975 full-time missionaries were assigned to the Farr West Stake.

The new flagpole erected near the city office building on 2000 West Street (materials donated by Jimmie Papageorge and Ernest L. Jensen and welded by Denis M. Petersen) was dedicated 4 July 1975.

Sally Chugg was chosen Weber County Dairy Princess on 11 April 1976.

In a meeting held 6 June 1976 Ernest L. Jensen asked for donations of money or angle iron to build tables for use in the community park bowery. The metal that was donated was taken to Denis Petersen's shop and with the help of several men, the tables were built and painted for use at the Bicentennial Celebration.

On 25 March 1977 the Utah Transit Authority started bus service to Farr West. Fare was 15 cents.

The following special offering from the editor will likely be informative to some readers, but it will bring fond memories to the few survivors of pre-1940 years.

The Saturday Night Bath

A piercing shriek came from the family bathroom, followed by a mournful wail, "Mama! Anita splashed soap in my eye!"

Under any other circumstances Jean or I would have rushed to the bathroom to settle the problem promptly, but in this case we chose to ignore the fuss.

"That's rather cramped quarters for four kids in one tub," I laughed. "Still, I guess there's more room by far than there would have been in the tub I had to use when I was growing up."

As I looked back a generation, I was grateful that we no longer had to use the old Number 3 washtub each Saturday night. That cleansing ritual was always preceded in the afternoon by loading down the old Monarch range with boiler, dishpan, teakettle and reservoir, all filled to capacity by carrying numerous bucketfuls of water from the distant old well, or, after about 1926, from the tap just outside the back door of our "pioneer" home. Then as bedtime drew near, the old galvanized washtub was brought into the kitchen and placed in the warmest spot in the house--in front of the heavily laden stove. Usually, we went up the line beginning with the youngest and finishing with my father after he had worn off the effects of a hard day's work by snoring away for a couple of hours in his favorite chair.

It was no trick at all to go through the ritual while I was growing up, but eventually the day came when I found it to be disadvantageous to be four or five inches taller than all the others in my family. At that point in time, it literally cramped my style to tie myself up in a knot to sit down inside the tub. I finally decided that it was easier to perch precariously on the edge of the tub until time for the final rinse. This way, I wasn't doubled up long enough to shut off my circulation. However, I learned to my dismay that there were other dangers to avoid, for as I turned around one night, I give myself a neat little branding job on the hot coal stove. Do you want proof? Well, I could show you the scar!

Other Disasters:

On October 29, 1929, when the Wall Street crash caused a loss of $74 billion, the great depression that ensued affected the lives of all Americans. People in the greater Ogden area were no exception to the tragedy. When the Ogden State Bank closed, some of our community residents lost their savings.

On 21 Oct 1906 no meetings were held on Sunday because of a terrible east wind or hurricane, which lasted about 36 hours, doing much damage.

The day of 22 April 1931 brought many unhappy memories for Farr West residents. An entry from the journal of Lola Taylor Wells: "We had a terrible wind storm on the 22nd. The wind blew harder than I have ever seen it. It was bad for 36 hours. The sand was so bad it was cloudy all day. It tore up trees everywhere. Over a dozen barns were torn down in Farr West. Telephone lines were snapped off. Crops were blown out."

REAL PROPERTY OPWNERS IN FARR WEST
(1870-1950 - Township 7 North Range 2 West)

COMPILER'S NOTE: Patents for real property were first issued by the government to Farr West settlers in 1870. Below is an alphabetical listing of property transfers as shown on county land records. Research in those abstract books of land records has been a learning experience. Some difficulty was encountered in determining whether certain entries pertained to Farr West, because not all pioneer boundaries coincide with section lines. The compiler excluded entries which appeared to be for the purpose of correcting surveys or to be adjustments within families; however, possible shortcomings are recognized in both the inclusions and exclusions. Aside from the basic information which is included here, the personal acquaintance of the compiler with many of the land transactions brings many interesting recollections and fond memories. Farr West has been a wonderful place in which to live!

THE FOLLOWING THREE SECTIONS OF THIS HISTORY
CONTAIN COPIES OF THE ORIGINAL U. S. CENSUS RECORDS
FOR FARR WEST FOR 1900 - 1920

1900 -- Colored Yellow

1910 -- Colored Pink

1920 -- Colored Green

These records are included with this historical record in the hopes that people with Farr West roots might learn more about their relatives to share with other family members.

The reader of this section should keep in mind that it may contain errors, because it was created by human beings. However, used properly, it may be a significant tool in compiling family history.
